Ogilvie Woos New Tax

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is expected to ask for a state income tax, a temporary one-cent increase in the state sales tax, and hikes in two or more other existing taxes in his budget message today.

Ogilvie's budget message will be precedent setting in that he will be the first governor in state history to submit a one-year, rather than a two-year budget.

Ike on Last Journey

WASHINGTON — A 21-gun salute sounded through the cavernous Union Station Monday as the 10-car funeral train for Dwight David Eisenhower, general of the army and 34th President of the United States, began the long journey to the plains of Kansas.

The train will arrive at midnight today in Abilene. The former president will be buried in the tiny all-faith chapel named Place of Meditation, next to his son, Dwight David Eisenhower, who died at the age of 3.

Milton in Hospital

WASHINGTON — Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late President, was admitted to Walter Reed Army Medical Center Monday "for observation."

The manager's office at the Washington Hilton Hotel said the 69-year-old president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University complained of not feeling well and asked to be hospitalized for a checkup. In Baltimore, George S. Wills, information director of Johns Hopkins, stressed the hospitalization is purely precautionary.

Obtain A-Plant Land

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie has announced the state has completed acquisition of 6,900 acres at $25.5 million for the atomic accelerator in the Weston area.

Ray Dickerson, director of the Department of Business and Economic Development, said title to the land will be conveyed to the Atomic Energy Commission in the "very near future."

Firms Late Tax Hit

SPRINGFIELD — A crackdown on business firms delinquent in filing returns for use, retailers' and service occupation taxes has been announced by State Revenue Director George Mahin. He sent letters to all retailers pointing out tax returns are due by the last day of each month following the month for which the tax liability is incurred.

Mahin said a rigid enforcement program against taxpayers who are two months delinquent will begin today.

Sirhan Trial Resumes

LOS ANGELES — The trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan for the murder of Sen Robert F. Kennedy resumes today with a prosecution psychiatrist, Dr. Seymour Pollack, on the witness stand. The case will probably go to the jury of seven men and five women next week.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the cost to the county to date to insure a fair trial for the 25-year-old defendant was $138,595. It is estimated the total cost will run to $1 million.

North Viets Rebuild

SAIGON — U.S. sources with access to intelligence reports and aerial photos said North Vietnam has completely repaired the damage inflicted by American bombers in the air war that former President Lyndon B. Johnson began scaling down exactly one year ago.

Other reports from North Vietnam said the country is suffering from food deficiencies and that a general manpower shortage is contributing to industrial shortcomings.

1,500 Ready to March

More than 1,500 local young people have already signed up to trek from Park Ridge to Rolling Meadows in Friday's Hike for the Hungry benefit.

David Wurm, youth minister at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect and a march coordinator, estimates that as many as 8,000 to 10,000 sponsors may be backing the hike.

Wurm says the number may swell by tomorrow, the last day to register for the march.

Sponsors will be contributing anywhere from 5 cents to $10 a mile to the Hike for the Hungry's three benefit organizations — Biafran relief, an Ecuadorian farm project and the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

Mark Severs of Arlington Heights, publicity chairman for the youth-sponsored project, says Prospect High School so far holds the registration record — 180 students. At Conant High School in Hoffman Estates, well off the march route, more than 100 students have been recruited by Charrie Kamin.

LAST NIGHT, student volunteers converged on Trinity Lutheran Church, Des Plaines, to paint signs that some of the marchers will carry. Another group gathered at St. Paul's Church in Mount Prospect to make armbands that will serve as the hikers' identification.

"Down with Hunger" and "Soul Power" will be typical of signs the marchers will carry, Severs says.

Adult volunteers who will help with the march will be briefed tonight at 8 at St. Paul's.

Hike coordinators estimate that 200 adults will be needed to assist along the march route. The adults will be serving as parade marshals, as crossing guards, or manning checkpoints where students can have their progress recorded — or let their parents know they're giving up.

The 18-mile parade route will follow few major streets.

Police in the six towns and cities along the route — Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows — helped hike coordinators pick a route that would tie up auto traffic as little as possible.

THE FUNDS DONATED by sponsors will be split three ways. A third will go to the Northwest Opportunity Center, a self-help agency working with Northwest suburban low income families — many of them Spanish-speaking migrants or ex-migrants.

Another third will be channeled through the United Nations to the International Red Cross, transporting agency for all food and medical relief sent to starving and ill residents of warring Biafra and Nigeria.

Wurm says the hike coordinators made independent checks of the Biafran relief handling and finally decided to channel funds raised through the U.N. rather than a church agency to prevent possible criticism from religious factions whose agencies were not selected.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) will get the final third of the funds raised from the hike. The FAO has agreed to earmark the suburban youth money to an agricultural development project in operation in Ecuador with substantial funds from that country's government.

Wurm says the Ecuadorian project is based on this principle: "If you give a man a fish, he eats for a day. If you teach a man to fish, he eats for life. In the case of Ecuador," Wurm adds, "what is being taught is better farming."

WURM IS NOT optimistic about reaching the Hike for the Hungry's original fund goal of $120,000. He says it will be Saturday, the day after the hike, before he has "even an estimate" of how much has been raised.

"But I think we've already achieved one goal — that of getting more people personally involved," Wurm said.

"We may have as many as 2,000 people making a personal sacrifice by marching. Another 8,000 to 10,000 are their sponsors."

"This means we have 12,000 people investing something of themselves, small or great, in the cause for hunger," he declared.

Woods Renews College Plea

by MARY SCHLOTT

Arlington Heights Village Pres. John G. Woods will renew his plea for early development of a Northwest suburban state college during today's Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) meeting in Chicago.

Woods says he has already discussed the area's need with the new "super board" president, George Clements, whom he knows through business contacts, and "thinks highly of."

He told the Herald he hopes to make the same points with the full IBHE complement that he has already made with Clements — that the Northwest suburban area is the fastest growing area in the state, that an extremely high percentage of its students are college material and that early action on development of a state "commuter college" here to insure land will be available.

Appearing with Woods will be High School Dist. 214 administrator Jack Martin. The two will represent a Northwest suburban citizens committee that lost out to Park Forest in a similar bid two years ago.

WOODS SAYS HE understands that the IBHE staff plans to recommend that the "super board" limit 1969 action to charging a study committee with looking over such things as population growth data and making new recommendations on what areas should get the priority when more senior college site money is available.

Woods says the staff apparently thinks the IBHE should put its major emphasis this General Assembly session on insuring that the legislature provide funds for construction of the two already-approved new colleges at Park Forest and Springfield.

"I think a new priority study is very much in order," Woods declared, adding that he is confident the Northwest suburbs would end up in first place on that list.

He warned, however, that it is essential that the study be "expedited" so purchase of land for a new Northwest suburban college can be made "before the cost becomes exorbitant or the land is just not available."

"That's a very real possibility," he declared.

THE IBHE ADDED THE new senior college matter to its agenda after State Reps. Eugene A. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, and E. J. Jorgi, D-Rockford, introduced a bill calling for location of two new senior colleges in Rockford and the suburban Northwest.

Woods says he supports the Rockford location, too, although he thinks their need is not as great as the local need.

"I'm in favor of Rockford, too. After all it's the second largest city in the state. It is not too far behind our community in terms of need and the ability of students to use the facilities."

Martin says the committee will be taking much the same approach as it did two years ago in its unsuccessful bid to get a senior college here.

"We feel this is a new board," Martin pointed out. "We won't feel bashful about saying what we did before — that the need is greatest here and that land is getting scarcer all the time."

The Northwest Municipal Conference, which draws its membership from Des Plaines to Barrington, has given strong backings to the citizens committee efforts.

A FEW DAYS ahead of schedule, the Easter Bunny visited the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center during the weekend. An idea sparked by local merchants, Donna Reese donned a costume for the occasion and gave a treat to all the children who passed by.

Palatine Woman Dies of Gunshot

A Palatine woman was found shot to death Sunday night in the Hanover Park home of her brother-in-law.

Hanover Park police said the victim, Mrs. Jean Matt, 235 E. Palatine Road, apparently died of wounds from a .22-caliber revolver. She was found by her brother-in-law, Peter Ducato, in his home at 7963 Sherwood Circle.

Mrs. Matt was pronounced dead on arrival at Sherman Hospital in Elgin. An inquest will be held today at 2:30 p.m. at the Schmidt Funeral Home in Elgin.

Mrs. Matt was the mother of two children.

GOPs Speak Alone

by MARTHA KOPER

On the eve of today's election, Republican candidates for Palatine Township offices closed their campaign at a League of Women Voters candidates' night.

Their Democratic opposition for the eight township posts, however, was conspicuously missing even though the Democratic slate had been invited to the forum at Fremd High School.

The forum had been scheduled to give township residents a final chance to question candidates before today's elections.

WHEN THE first roll call of township candidates was taken, only three of the eight Republicans answered.

Township Supervisor Howard I. Olsen told the audience his running-mates were putting the finishing touches on their campaigns but promised, "we'll be here 100 per cent before you leave."

Questions from the audience, which numbered about 75 including candidates, centered on tonight's annual town meeting.

Township candidates were asked about the expected transfer of township funds at the meeting and explained that township officials had met with the various agencies seeking the surplus funds and those meetings were the basis for the amounts which would be recommended tonight.

Funds which the township receives but does not need for its own operation are transferred to other agencies, such as the elementary school district, at the annual town meeting.

When the four candidates for Palatine Park District seats were called to the platform, David George was the most popular with the audience.

CURIOUS ABOUT an advertisement that appeared in Monday's Herald calling George "Your Republican Party Candidate," one member of the audience asked if George had received the endorsement of the local GOP since the park district elections are considered non-partisan.

George said the ad "was my error. It was sort of an untruth."

He said the Republican Party is not backing any candidate in the park district election.

"I only meant to indicate that I'm a registered Republican in Palatine," he said.

Mrs. Margery Whitcomb of the Palatine Township Mental Health Advisory Committee has urged that a "township mental health committee under the provisions of the Mental Health Facilities Act" be formed to replace the present committee.

The act, passed in 1965 by the Illinois Legislature allows a municipality to create a mental health fund.

The proposed mental health board would be empowered to review and evaluate community mental health services and facilities, to submit a program of community mental health services and facilities, to employ personnel needed to carry out this program, and to enter into contracts for the rendition or operation of services and facilities on a per capita basis.

The new committee would serve as a constant adviser to the township supervisor and the board of auditors during the year, and would make recommendations concerning expenditures of excess funds.

Because "they would be more than an advisory committee," the new board would be able to take more positive action than in the past.

Mrs. Whitcomb said Wheeling Township has this type of board.

THE PRESENT Palatine Mental Health Advisory Committee has also recommended the establishment of a family counseling service, "when the township is not in such a critical financial situation."

The advisory committee expressed "disappointment" at their share of this year's surplus township budget, which allocated $28,000 for mental health.

Mrs. Whitcomb said that if townships could get together and cooperate with one another, there could be "more efficient planning and expenditure" of existing funds. She suggested that Palatine and Wheeling townships could join with Elk Grove and Schaumburg in combining their services.

Discussing the proposed new committee, Mrs. Whitcomb, a professional social worker, said that "wonderful people have seen the need" for this type of committee. "It would be a step in the right direction to acquire the services needed by the Northwest suburbs in the field of mental health."

With more people coming into the area, "there is greater need" for mental health services, she said.

Mrs. Whitcomb said, "If Palatine Township is sincere in wanting to provide good mental health facilities and services to its residents, this is one possible step that could be taken by the governmental unit. There may be other or better things we could do."

Regrets Ad Misunderstanding

A candidate for the Palatine Park District board of commissioners whose newspaper advertisement Monday called him a "Republican Party Candidate" said he regrets any misunderstanding the ad may have caused.

David George's two column ad on page five of The Herald said "Vote for David H. George for Palatine Park Commissioner. Your Republican Party Candidate."

George was not endorsed by the Republican Party and was not authorized to use the Republican Party name.

"I TRIED to indicate in the ad that I was a Republican," he said. "But I didn't realize I would put myself in jeopardy."

He said he is a registered Republican but is not running under the GOP auspices or with GOP support.

"I regret the misunderstanding this may have caused," George said.

Other candidates for the two park district seats are Charles Simons and Waldon Degner.

Burn's Campaigning Hit By Committeeman

Palatine Township Republican Committeeman Walter A. Schaw Monday praised the conduct of this year's township election campaigns "with one exception."

Schaw criticized John J. Burns, Democratic candidate for township collector, for failing to list his party affiliation on campaign material and for "spreading campaign material that has no bearing on the elections."

Some of Burns' material calls for an end to power failures, overcrowded schools and flooding.

The township collector's function is to collect real estate and personal property taxes and pass the funds to the county collector's office.

Man Dies in Freak Accident

Army Sgt. George W. Bostic, 22, 842 W. Ainslie, who was stationed at the Nike Base in Arlington Heights, died after being struck by two autos moments apart.

A coroner's inquest into the death was postponed yesterday when the driver of one of the cars, Mrs. Anna L. McGoldrick, 41, 4732 Arbor Drive, Rolling Meadows, said she was unable to contact a lawyer. The hearing was continued until April 21.

Rolling Meadows police gave this account of the accident:

War Memorial To Be Topic

Palatine organizations have been invited to a special meeting of the Palatine Community Council Wednesday night to consider possible support of a memorial to local servicemen who have died in Vietnam.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brookway.

According to Mrs. Arlene Kallinger, corresponding secretary of the community council, all organizations and churches in Palatine have been invited.

Establishment of a Vietnam memorial was suggested by Herald City Editor Ed Munnane after Pfc. David B. Arnold, a Palatine youth who graduated from Fremd High School, was killed in the war.

SEVERAL POSSIBLE memorials have been suggested, including dedication of a room in Palatine's proposed new library and dedication of a portable band shelter which would be used by the Palatine Village Band.

"The memorial deemed most suitable will be more meaningful to the families of these men if the entire community participates in this project," Mrs. Kallinger said.

Set May 7 Park Hearing

Circuit Court Judge Harry Comerford has set May 7 for the hearing on a petition filed to dissolve the Palatine Rural Park District.

The petition which was circulated by a group of homeowners in Palatine and Rolling Meadows was accepted by the judge Monday morning.

stalled. He then got out of the car to push it to the shoulder of the road, while the passenger in his car, Spec. 4 Lawrence Hill of Chicago, steered.

WHILE HE pushed the car in the darkness, the vehicle driven by Mrs. McGoldrick hit Bostic and sent him sprawling into the road. Mrs. McGoldrick stopped her car and, along with Hill, went to aid Bostic. But another car, driven by David H. Cavi, 38, 4238 Wilson Ave., Rolling Meadows, struck the downed man after avoiding a collision with Mrs. McGoldrick's stopped car.

The accident occurred between 10:30 and 10:50 p.m., according to Officer Charles Smith. Bostic's car lights would not function because his battery failed, Smith said.

Mrs. McGoldrick was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision and Cavi was charged with colliding with a pedestrian on a roadway.

More than 100 signatures from people living in Banbury Lane and Pebble Creek of Palatine, and Creekside and Forest Estates of Rolling Meadows are attached to the petition, according to Roger Bjorvik, local attorney hired to represent the homeowners.

Bjorvik said he's now contacting representatives from several groups to testify at the hearing. A 20-day notice of the public hearing is required.

The group is charging the Palatine Rural Park District board of commissioners with several violations of Illinois statute which are given as just cause for dissolution in the code.

BUT FRANCIS KELLY, attorney for the rural park district said the statute does not apply to his district.

The district could be dissolved without calling for a general election after the public hearing, according to statute.

"If the allegations are found to be true by the judge, he can declare the district dissolved," the statute states.

Most of the areas involved in the petition represent subdivisions interested in disannexing from the rural district so annexation to the Palatine and Rolling Meadows Park Districts would be possible.

The hearing is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on May 7 in Room 1703 of the Civic Center in Chicago.

When my long sought ship comes in Grant that its cargo be not of mere wealth,
Not of jewels, but measured in health.
Pray that its treasure chest always will be
Brimfull of tolerance and humility.
May its goodwill bring and forever will ban
Misunderstanding of my fellow man.
And all broken promises, it then will mend
When my ship's journey comes to an end.

Writing poetry is enjoyment and satisfaction for Philip Erck of Mount Prospect. It's his hobby. It's expressing 70 years of a man's life in a simple sentence tempered with the wisdom of experience.

"I have never had any formal training in poetry. When I was in school, we didn't study poetry like the children do today," explained Erck. "Writing just comes naturally for me, and I find satisfaction in expressing my thoughts on paper."

Erck, a retired dental laboratory technician, writes in his spare time, especially during the winter months when "time hangs heavy on my hands." His poetry is light, simple, and refreshing. Many of his poems are humorous, while some are sprinkled with a twinge of sadness for the days gone by.

The day I do regret was when
I thought it would be fine
To hold a rare reunion with
That old gang of mine.
I found the fellows changed it seems
Unlike the friends I knew
No doubt, they felt the same of me
And disappointed, too.
So always leave your memories
Way back there in the past
Don't try to bring them up to date
For then they'll never last.

"My poems are light in content and simple, because I don't enjoy 'heavy' poems — poems that are geared strictly for the intellectual, the student of serious poetry," he said.

"I write for the common people who still enjoy the simple things in life. I try to capture the same simplicity in my poems that Edward Guest did in his works."

ERCK WRITES ON A variety of subjects, but his favorite theme is nature and its beauty. "People just don't seem to appreciate the simple things in life, like a beautiful sunset or the coming of spring, which we can always have and enjoy at no expense."

The protesting thunders echo
On far-flung mountains of stone
Her penmanship of lightning
These precious things I own.
Each unfinished rainbow's hallow
Or the dew on the rose-covered vine,
And the perfume of fleeting showers,
These priceless things are mine.

"I wish that I hadn't been forced to retire because of illness," he noted with a touch of sadness, "but I am getting old, and what more can I expect at this age? I have too much free time on my hands — free time is no longer a luxury but a routine."

"Each day is the same, and I live my life now for my grandchildren. At my age, I guess there's not much time left anyway."

As the sands of time drift slowly
Through the hour-glass of life,
I pause and reflect on its meaning
With its pleasures and its strife.
Have I stretched the bounds of honesty,
To achieve material gain,
Only to win false happiness,
Its reward, a tarnished stain.

Do I sit in unfair judgment?
Without due authority,
Or listen to idle gossip
And that no one's important but me?
I need not question these charges,
As I fear they all could be true.
Now probe your soul for an answer
Can they also be said of you?

Fund Approval Set

Allocation of surplus funds in the town budget, will highlight the Palatine Town meeting tonight at 8, in Kimball Hill School, Rolling Meadows.

Electeds will be asked to approve transfer of $28,000 for mental health, $14,000 for School Dist. 15, and $950 for the leisure club for senior citizens. The surplus amounted to $43,950.84. At the last township board meeting, it was pointed out that the extra 84 cents, "could be used for stamps to mail checks out."

After preliminaries, an introduction of officers will be held, and Margaret Chapman, town clerk, will give instructions for the meeting.

A moderator will be elected and sworn in, followed by a reading of reports of the town fund, general assistance, collector's and assessor's. Voters will be asked to give their approval of the reports.

THE TOWN BUDGET will then be adopted, pending voter approval.

Following the budget will be a consideration of the resale of real estate and the transaction of surplus funds to the three groups asking for funds.

After an adoption of the budget and highway commissioner's budget, an open forum will be held. Plans will then be formulated for the next town meeting.

Collect $4,060 For UCP Fund

Nearly 900 Palatine, Inverness and Rolling Meadows men and women have volunteered their time since Jan. 12 to collect $4,060.61 in United Cerebral Palsy's annual fund-raising appeal.

With the campaign nearing completion, UCP chairmen report the appeal has been very successful.

The annual appeal began on Jan. 12 with a "53-Minute March."

The money donated will be used to continue and strengthen UCP's program of direct services (such as the Child Developmental Center, family counseling, day camps and adult programs) research and education.

SCS Offers to Test Soil of Suburbs for Map

The northwest suburbs are first in line for soil mapping that will determine best development potential if the Cook County Board buys the unique service.

The Northeast Illinois U. S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service (SCS) has offered to do soil testing at 50 cents per acre for the county's 130,000 unincorporated acres.

Commissioners informally agreed Monday the northwest suburbs, as the county's fastest growing area, should be mapped first, pending favorable board action.

Soil conservationists said benefits that would come from the service are:

- Predicting any development problems in advance so best use is made of the land and engineering techniques are made mandatory.
- Using soil mapping as a basis for zoning decisions when there is a question on most desirable development.

TOTAL COST for Cook County for soil mapping was listed at $63,000 but under the SCS matching fund program, actual cost would be $32,500. Warren Fitzgerald, area conservationist for the Northeast Illinois SCS, said this can be paid at $1,000 to $9,000 per year, depending on the project's speed.

The most optimistic date seen for completing county mapping was 1972 or 1973. The SCS is short of men but employees will be assigned to the area of greatest interest, Fitzgerald said.

Commissioner Floyd T. Fulle called the special board meeting for the presentation on soil conservation. Fulle said the SCS proposal would be considered in the board's public service committee and a recommendation made to the board at its second April meeting.

Fulle has maintained in the past that soil conditions should be a determinant in land use and a possible basis for determining zoning classifications.

McHENRY COUNTY, fully mapped will be the first county in the nation to have a zoning ordinance solely based on geologic conditions, it was pointed out.

The SCS is contacting each of the six counties in the metropolitan region.

If mapping is done in northwest suburban Cook County, area officials might find a stronger case for objections in zoning matters. Local officials now are highly critical of zoning decisions made in unincorporated areas on community peripheries.

Keith Chidley, chairman of the North Cook County Soil and Water Conservation District, said soil testing would prevent such development blunders as Winston Park on Salt Creek's floodplain in Palatine.

Ken Fiske, executive director of the Northeast Illinois Natural Resource Service Center, said Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Schaumburg have contracted for soil mapping within community boundaries. A portion of Elk Grove Village's maps were used for demonstration.

FITZGERALD said testing is done by boring to a depth of five feet. Soil scientists walk each area of land, he said. Types of soil and geologic structure are codified and then interpreted for suitability for urbanization, septic tanks, agriculture, wildlife and recreation, or parks and playgrounds.

Soil testing is a refinement of the U. S. Geological Service Map which shows flood areas along the country's major tributaries, Fitzgerald said.

The Cook County Building Department now checks building applications against this map before issuing permits, Commissioner Charles Bonk said.

Bonk, chairman of the public service committee, spoke favorably of the proposal, saying the cost of service could be passed on to developers.

Harper Hires Planner, PR Director

A planning and development staff man and a public relations director were hired by Harper Junior College last week.

Named director of planning and development was John Adams Lucas, who is completing a Ph.D. in occupation organizational psychology at the University of Tennessee. Lucas' annual salary will be $17,500.

Hired as community relations director was Donald N. Andries of Deerfield, 32, a journalism graduate who for the past three years has run his own public relations firm. Andries' salary will be $16,500 a year.

Harper Pres. Robert Lahti, in recommending Andries' appointment, noted that he was in charge of the Barat College public relations program for three years.

ANDRIES WILL START April 8, and Lucas will join the community college staff in September.

The college board Thursday also approved hiring six new faculty members.

Charles Edward Norris, who has studied at the University of the Americas in Mexico City and served as a Peace Corps worker in Peru, was hired to teach sociology and anthropology. His instructor's salary will be $9,000.

Angela Jeanne D'Aversa of DeKalb was hired as a social science instructor at an annual salary of $8,500. Miss D'Aversa graduated "cum laude" from Georgian Court College in 1966 and received a master's degree from Northern Illinois University.

DONALD R. HOLLAND of DeKalb was named a marketing and management instructor at a salary of $9,000. Holder of a master's degree in business administration from Northern Illinois University, he is currently teaching at Morton Junior College.

Gail Liptrap was hired as coordinator of secretarial science courses at Harper Junior College. Her salary as instructor will be $8,750 per year. She is currently completing work for a master's degree at Indiana State University, Terre Haute.

A former instructor at the Kamehameha School in Honolulu, Hawaii, will join the Harper English faculty. He is James R. Sturdevant, currently teaching at Ohio Northern University, Delaware, Ohio. Sturdevant will have the rank of assistant professor. His salary will be $11,900.

Richard M. Bernstein, of Buffalo Grove was hired to teach electrical engineering and physics. A graduate of the University of Illinois, he has been teaching on the Chicago Circle Campus and at Illinois Institute of Technology while holding a full-time job in industry and attending classes at IIT.

Bernstein will be an assistant professor. His annual salary was set at $11,000.

Cerebral Palsy Gets $5,559

United Cerebral Palsy (UCP) collected $5,559.56 in the Arlington Heights area during its annual fund raising appeal, the "53-Minute March" on Jan. 12.

Mrs. Harold Freedman, 1503 Jane Ave., Arlington Heights, was the chairman for the drive in this area. She was assisted by 821 men and women in the area who took part in the march.

"I WANT TO thank the volunteers who gave so generously of their time to collect these funds," Mrs. Freedman said. "They join me in saluting the kind people of our community who gave to help victims of cerebral palsy."

The donated money will be used to continue and strengthen UCP's program of direct services including the Child Development Center, family counseling, day camps and adult programs. It will also be used for research and education.

To Choose 3 For Library

Voters will elect three trustees for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library today, increasing the board to seven members.

Legislation passed in 1967 provides for the addition of a seventh trustee in this year's election. Purpose of the bill, introduced by State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, is to avoid the complication and confusion of the votes.

Candidates in the uncontested election are Francis J. Higgins and incumbents Mrs. Florence Hendrickson and Richard Frisbie.

ACTIVE IN the Arlington Heights Woman's Club and the village Historical Society, Mrs. Hendrickson is completing her first six-year term.

Frisbie, an author and self-employed advertising consultant was elected in April 1967 to fill an unexpired term of two years.

Kick Palm Tours Soviet Union

Rik Palm, a junior history major, will be one of eight students from Wisconsin State University-River Falls who will participate in a tour of the Soviet Union, leaving Saturday. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Palm, 451 Elmhurst Road, Mount Prospect.

Organized to provide students with an opportunity to study Russian life, government and culture, the 15-day tour will include visits to grammar schools, high schools and colleges.

Students will interview teachers and professors, visit factories, talk with government officials and visit such landmarks as Leningrad's Hermitage and the Bolshoi Theatre.

Schmidt Wins Gold A In Culver Honor Band

Robert C. Schmidt has been awarded a gold A for superior academic achievement at Culver Military Academy.

The presentation was made at a recent honors convocation in Eppley Auditorium.

Schmidt, a sophomore, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis A. Schmidt, 300 Lexington Circle, Palatine.

Dennis L. Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Stevens, 332 N. Lexington Drive, Palatine, is a member of the honor band of Culver Military Academy.

The honor band was selected through auditions and includes the 53 best musicians at Culver, according to Capt. Gilbert M. Fernandes, director.

Restaurant Reflects Interest in Antiques

The rustic atmosphere of Barney's, a new restaurant at 27 W. Campbell St., Arlington Heights, reflects the interest in antiques of its owners, Don and Julia Walsh.

A pot-bellied stove, an antique clock and pews from St. Mary's Church in Long Grove lend a comfortable air to the business.

CHICKEN, RIBS, and beef sandwiches are the specialties of the house. Patrons may stop for lunch, an evening snack, or use the carry-out service.

The Walshes, residents of Arlington Heights for several years, have planned this venture for a long time. He was a salesman, and she taught in local schools for three years prior to opening the business. They did most of the decorating of this former butcher shop themselves.

Vanishing Playground Equipment Case Ends

The mystery of disappearing playground equipment from some Arlington Heights parks was recently solved by Park Director Thomas Thornton.

Thornton said the equipment was removed to prepare for site development of the parks. Contracts for the work were awarded Thursday night by the Park Board and construction is expected to begin soon.

SITE DEVELOPMENT for the parks was approved in last summer's referendum and will include grading and planting of trees and bushes.

Existing parks which will undergo development include Virginia Terrace Park in the Northwest section of the village, Evergreen Park in the central eastern part of Arlington Heights, Frontier Park in the Greenbrier subdivision and the Hickory Meadows Retention Basin in northeastern Arlington Heights.

Services Slated

Do you have any special plans for attending Holy Week services during the last three days of Lent? If not, the Mount Prospect-Prospect Heights ministerium will give four daily presentations in the Randhurst Mall April 3 and 4 at 1, 4, 7, and 8 p.m. and April 5 at 1 and 4 p.m.

Various denominations in the Mount Prospect area will participate in the program.

Proper Flag Display For Mourning Period

A 30-day period of mourning has been announced by President Nixon in memory of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Flags should be at half-staff during this period, or, if this is not possible, a black streamer may be attached to the top of the flag. If flown at night, the flag should be illuminated by a spotlight or floodlight.

April Value Days at Randhurst are next week, April 10, 11, and 12. I hope you receive your Shopper's Guide each month in the mail. If not, please call me at 259-0500 and I'll put your name on our mailing list. If you do not receive one this month, copies are available in the Randhurst Corporation Office or in the Randhurst stores.

Last Wednesday Randy Rabbit was visited by 15 children from an Arlington Heights Head-Start school. They toured the Mall, enjoying the monkeys, the fish in the fountain, and everything in Bunny Park. The ducklings, being a highlight of Bunny Park, of course attracted the children.

Consequently, the day before Easter their school will become the happy home for two of the ducklings of Bunny Park. If anyone else is interested in obtaining one of these ducklings free of charge on April 5 (just in time for Easter), please call me.

All of us at Randhurst wish you and yours a very happy Easter!

Ask Vote Law Rule

Raymond Inman of 310 Columbine Drive, Prospect Heights, could become High School Dist. 214's board of education representative from the unincorporated areas.

It may be that all he has to do is get more votes than either of the two other Dist. 214 candidates from the unincorporated areas — without getting more votes than candidates coming from one of the municipalities within the two-township district.

If that sounds confusing to the reader, it also does to Dist. 214 business manager, Dr. Robert Weber. Weber is still seeking a legal ruling on the question.

Inman, 40, is one of four candidates for two 3-year terms that will be filled April 12. The others are Richard Stamm of Mount Prospect, B. K. McMinn of Rolling Meadows and Arthur Aronson, board president who has an Arlington Heights mail address though he also lives in an unincorporated section.

INMAN WAS INTERVIEWED for two 1-month school board appointments that ultimately went to Stamm and John M. Costello of Mount Prospect, who has filed for a one-year term along with James T. Ryan of Arlington Heights and Don McGlothlin of Wheeling. McGlothlin is another area candidate from the unincorporated areas.

The Illinois School Code requires that one of the Dist. 214 board members represent voters from outside the municipalities.

Inman has not held elective office before. He was president of the Euclid-Lake homeowners association in 1968. A department manager for a subsidiary of American Hospital Supply Corp., he will have three children in Dist. 214 schools next year and another three in grade schools.

"I want to assure that all the children in this district, mine included, get the best possible high school education. Being a board member gives me a chance to vote my opinion, not just express it," inman declared in announcing his candidacy.

IN A HERALD interview, Inman came out strong for increased vocational education while still recognizing that high schools can only go partway in training students for many occupations.

"If what I see at Hersey is an example, we can give a man a start in the printing trades but that's about it — a start," he pointed out.

Inman favors a "Yes" vote on all three referenda questions that will be put before the voters April 12. He backs the $8.7 million Rolling Meadows high school bond referenda and the two tax ceiling increases — one to raise the educational tax rate 21 cents and the other to raise the building maintenance tax 12½ cents.

He says he sees "no alternative" to any of the three but pledges, if elected, to see the money wisely spent.

"I see no way to change the upward trend of salaries and costs generally," Inman concedes.

He points, however, to recent bidding on additional chairs for Hersey as not "leaving sufficient flexibility to allow bidders to become competitive."

ALL THE DIST. 214 candidates have been asked two questions in Herald interviews:

1) What are your views on Citizens Committee suggestions that Dist. 214 consider an extended school day and/or operating the schools year-around?

2) Would you encourage or discourage cooperation between Dist. 214 and the parochial high schools through shared time, joint use of facilities, etc.?

Inman called for "moving on with" studies of possible savings through year-around school operations, noting that the Citizens Committee report said enrollment capacity could be increased as much as 33 per cent.

RAYMOND INMAN

He speculated, however, that an extended school-year operation might mean a "fairly significant increase in teacher costs."

INMAN SAID HE would favor "shared time" arrangements with Catholic high schools in which the parochial students attended a public high school part-time if it meant deferring collapse of the private school system, and the resulting heavy influx of students into Dist. 214.

"Overall, I have no quarrel with the actions of the present board. I can't say enough about what they have done in the way of providing facilities and opportunities," he said.

"I'd like to see it stay that way and I know what I'd do under similar circumstances. I don't know what other candidates might do," Inman asserted.

PERSONS PASSING the gym of Sullivan School, Prospect Heights yesterday, on looking through the door window would have seen Principal Don Graham and students pledging allegiance to the flag during a memorial to the late President Dwight Eisenhower.

New Church Pastor Installed

The Rev. Randall B. Bosch of Brielle, N. J., was installed as pastor of the Peace Reformed Church of Mount Prospect Thursday evening by the Classis of Chicago. Reformed Church in America

Bosch has served as minister of the Reformed Church in Brielle since 1961. During his pastorate there the church received 363 members and conducted two building programs. He served as president of the Classis of New Brunswick, Reformed Church in America; secretary and vice president of the local Rotary Club; chaplain in the Civil Air Patrol, and chairman of the local Juvenile Court Committee. He is a member of the editorial council of The Church Herald, the Reformed Church magazine, and was a member of the local Ministerium and Chamber of Commerce.

A native of Holland, Mich., Bosch was graduated from Hope College, and New Brunswick Theological Seminary. He served in the Army for two years, and was associate pastor of the Pompton Lakes Reformed Church in New Jersey. Mr. Bosch is married and has four children.

VISITING ministers participating in the installation were the Rev. Roland Ratmeyer, vice president of the Chicago Classis, presiding; the Rev. Stanley Vugteveen, pastor of Covenant Reformed Church of Downers Grove, in charge of devotions; the Rev. Harri Zegerius, pastor of Emmanuel Reformed Church, Chicago, delivering the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Ellsworth TenClay, pastor of Fellowship Reformed Church of Lombard, giving the charge to the congregation. Dr. Marion deVelder, general secretary of the Reformed Church in America in New York City, delivered the sermon, entitled "Tested in Open Competition."

Friends and members of Peace Reformed Church attended a fellowship hour with refreshments following the ceremony.

The Way We See It

Keep Ombudsman

Politics is threatening to plug the ear promised to the citizens of Illinois by Lt. Gov. Paul Simon.

When Simon campaigned for the state's second highest elective office, one of his most significant pledges was to serve as Illinois' first "ombudsman" — sort of a special representative and trouble-shooter for the people, a man to whom they could come with their complaints, problems and suggestions about the way they are governed.

Simon pictured himself as something of a traveling liaison, hearing firsthand what the citizens and the communities felt should be done for them, then sitting down with appropriate state and local leaders to see if there is some solution.

His own words expressed it best: "We've got to get out among the people and hear what their problems are, how government can legitimately better help them. Most people feel that no one listens to them, that they haven't any voice in government."

In an era of growing disillusionment and disenchantment with the responsiveness of government, Simon's idea made extraordinarily good sense.

But now the entire concept is threatened, and the root of the threat looks purely partisan.

Republican members of the Illinois Budgetary Commission are attacking both the ombudsman idea and the budget Simon has proposed to carry it out.

Led by commission chairman Sen. Everett R. Peters (R-St. Joseph), GOP commission members accused Simon of trying to set up a bureaucracy of his own, of confusing himself with the governor, and of trying to assume the ombudsman role without statutory or constitutional authority.

They tried to convert their displeasure into a paring of Simon's proposed $186,100 budget to one of $74,000, which would leave his office as emasculated as it traditionally has been. Happily, no final action was taken, and the budget request was handed to a three-man subcommittee for further study.

What clearly comes through in the GOP objections to Simon's idea is a fear that he will develop political stature unknown to former lieutenant governors, and that possibility is especially distasteful to them with Democrat Simon serving with a Republican governor.

An added irony is that Simon — whom the Republicans on the commission regard as so ambitious — acquiesced earlier this year when the GOP leader in the senate, W. Russell Arrington of Evanston, took over the lieutenant governor's offices in the statehouse. Simon consented to take smaller quarters, reportedly with the pledge that he would be at least allowed a larger staff.

Now politics threatens to scuttle even that, and it shouldn't be allowed to happen. Simon's ombudsman idea — judged on its own merits — is unquestionably sound, and that should be the criterion in assessing whether Simon's budget request is to be met.

Further, the fact that the state has not had an ombudsman before, and does not specifically constitutionally provide for one, should have nothing to do with it. The role is needed.

Suburban voters, though they are traditionally Republican, have a major stake in the issue. Simon has made it clear that he recognizes that suburbanites have particular problems, just as much as do ghetto-dwellers or the poor of some of the state's rural regions. He intends to give the suburbs equally high priority in his problem-seeking.

It is, in short, in the best interests of all the people of Illinois that Simon's proposal not be short-circuited before it is even given a chance to bear results. That message should be made clear to your own state legislators, and to the three men who can most influence the decision on Simon's budget request: Gov. Ogilvie, Sen. Arrington and Sen. Peters.

Scalping Party

Palatine Today

Election Discouragements

by ED MURNANE

Politicians aren't the only ones who get excited at election time.

Ardent followers of the political art, and this writer includes himself in that group, develop a certain frenzy as the various election days approach on the calendar.

But despite the enthusiasm, there are two things about elections that can be extremely frustrating, not only to the close followers of the struggles, but to the casual student who is trying to fulfill his civic obligations by voting.

ONE IS THE insistence of people to affix labels to voters, usually by assuming that a voter MUST be either a Democrat or a Republican, with no variations or in-betweens.

The second is the failure by candidates to stick to meaningful matters in their campaigns and instead to attempt to cloud the real issues in order to confuse the voters into voting their way.

Today is the first of several election days this spring, and, as is always the case, I've already experienced both election year discouragements.

The first is not nearly as serious as the second, but it is frustrating, particularly to the voter who does not consider himself aligned with one party or the other.

IT'S EVEN MORE frustrating when a political independent is hit from both sides, told by some that he's obviously a Democrat and by others that he's obviously a Republican.

Last November, I supported Hubert Humphrey for President. I publicly endorsed him in a newspaper column, and I campaign for him as much as personal time would permit.

As a result, I was branded as a Democrat by many, including some close friends who I thought should know better.

One friend, who refuses to subscribe to any newspaper because they clutter up the house, asked me to clip out an article which had appeared in one of the Chicago papers.

I TOLD HIM I didn't get that particular paper, and he quickly replied, "Oh, that's right, you're a (Democrat/Republican), you wouldn't get that paper."

Here was a guy who had the labels fixed so strongly on people that he felt he could assume which paper a person would read.

As things have turned out, Democratic candidates have entered the Rolling Meadows election and are listed as Democrats. I would again argue that they certainly have a right to run as Democrats.

But much more distressing than this election-year label-mania is the failure by candidates to tell the truth, or at least not to purposely mislead.

THE PALATINE Township race that is ending today had a prime example of this.

One of the candidates, who has omitted his political party label from most of his campaign material, is spreading literature that may be very harmless but it certainly is a disservice to the party and to the voters who want to cast an intelligent vote.

John Burns is running for collector as a Democrat. Yet, probably because this area is solidly Republican, he fails to list his party on campaign material.

That's not necessarily so important, since a candidate cannot disassociate himself from the party on the ballot, and that's where it counts.

BUT SOME OF the literature is important.

Burns asks voters on one sheet if they are tired of flooding, school overcrowding, power failures and other misfortunes which voters are certainly tired of.

He uses this as a means of saying change is needed and he should be elected. As collector, he would have nothing to do with any of the problems, but voters frequently don't understand what different officials can and cannot do.

It's truly a shame that something as exciting as an election can be so tarnished by both the labelists and the candidates themselves.

Immanuel—A Significant Century

Immanuel Lutheran Church of Palatine has joined the select roster of Northwest Suburban congregations with a full century or more of service.

It is currently celebrating its centennial observance with a series of special events continuing through June.

It was a hundred years ago that a small group of citizens gathered on the platform of the Palatine railway depot to discuss formation of a Lutheran church.

In March, 1869, Immanuel Lutheran Church was formally organized with an initial membership of 11 families. Today the church holds four worship services every Sunday and has 2,500 baptized members.

It welcomed the first resident pastor and school teacher in 1870, and in 1873 the church affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri.

In 1926 the present Lutheran school was erected on the site of the first church building. The present church was built 57 years ago, and the massive brick structure with its towering spire has been a familiar landmark at Plum Grove Road and Wood Street ever since.

To launch its second century of growth, development, and service, Immanuel has begun construction of a new $500,000 church building of contemporary architecture on an adjoining site. It is scheduled for completion early next year.

The church's religious strength and tradition have been a vitally creative force in extending the concept of suburbia to include a higher standard of spiritual living as well as material living.

It has enlisted and trained people as free persons for responsible Christian citizenship, inspiring and urging them to be effective witnesses to their faith in every vocational and civic relationship.

We congratulate Immanuel Lutheran Church during this centennial celebration. Throughout this century of change, challenge, and growth, it has been a distinguished spokesman of those convictions, ideals, and beliefs which have helped our suburbs to more fully realize the promise of fine community life.

A Needed Job, Quietly Done

by JAMES VESELY

They say there is nothing like a crisis to mark the difference between men. The person who retains a cool head, who can grasp a situation and take action is a rare individual who often makes the difference between injury or safety to those around him.

They used to say that such an ability to remain calm only came by birth. A man either reacted to a disaster calmly or he flew apart, causing confusion and danger.

But that kind of presence of mind doesn't come as a birthright. It comes with trial and error, with training and practice.

IN MOUNT Prospect, and in other communities throughout the country, there is a local training ground for disaster. It is the local unit of Civil Defense.

CD in Mount Prospect is a loose confederation of men with varied backgrounds. Firemen, businessmen, community leaders and a Reserve Air Force colonel meet to discuss matters of life and death in an unpredictable world.

What do they do? They run courses in shelter management for local residents who may someday find themselves caring for a hundred people in a survival shelter. They show teenagers how to run radiation detection devices and how to ration water. They show a person how to live when living isn't very easy.

All of the work of the Mount Prospect CD unit is not directed at surviving a nuclear attack. The unit is now undertaking a project in tornado education for the community. They have brought together ham radio operators, taxi companies and construction crews to utilize all the radios in the community to rapid communication. The CD unit has established a tornado warning net and shown films of tornadoes all over town.

WITH VERY little fanfare, the Mount Prospect CD unit obtained a complete 200-bed hospital which can be opened from its containers and put into use immediately. The hospital now sits at the Bruning Co., ready if needed.

Knox Notes

And the Tape Stares Back, Mute in Victory

by KEN KNOX

Two fables for our time:

Once there was a woman, an old woman, who knew much sadness in her life.

Her husband was called from her by the crisis of a great war, and he fought, and he died.

Many years passed, and she faced her loneliness and learned to live with it.

BUT SHE WAS tested again, and more harshly. Through sickness, she became disabled — totally — and her physician gave her no promise for recovery.

She turned to her government for help, and it did help, sending her $132.70 every month so that she could continue to exist.

But she was to suffer even more. She was told she had the most dread of diseases — cancer — and in its most chilling form — terminal.

She knew helpless fear, and worse, she knew great pain, which reminded her each moment of the futility of her life.

She needed help again, for of the money she received from her government, $33 had to go every month for medicine, mostly to take away her pain.

She knew that because her husband had fought in the great war, and died, that she could have more help, at least to pay for her medicine.

It was late winter, the middle of February, when she wrote to the agency entrusted to solve problems such as hers.

SHE WAITED.

It was early winter, the end of November of the same year, when the answer came to her.

"We wish to act promptly on your recent correspondence . . ." the answer began.

It was nine months and one week from the day she wrote for help. She could have waited that long for the answer, for she had learned to endure during her years of trial, and did not make the mistake of counting each day as one.

But this time, even for the old woman, the wait was too long. Five months and 12 days before the promise of help arrived, she had died.

END OF FABLE I.

There was an old couple, a man and a woman, who knew much happiness on their land.

It was a home to them, and a farm, and they loved its soil and especially its trees, which they nurtured for many years.

But the day came, as it must even in our most tranquil regions, when the man and woman were told the land could no longer be theirs, and it was needed for something more important.

A thing of wonder and scientific marvel was to be built there, and there was no room for homes or farms or trees.

But they would be treated fairly, their government told them, and they would be paid for all that was being taken from them.

THERE WAS NO choice for the man and the woman, and they knew that, and they did not want to be a barrier to more important things.

So they would leave. But could they, they wondered, take with them a few of the trees and shrubs they had grown? There were, after all, 80 acres of them, and they probably would all be cut from the land, and just a few of them would at least be a memory to them of what they had left behind.

So they dug from the ground a few of them, and wrapped their roots in burlap, and prepared to take them away.

No, they were told, you cannot have them, for they no longer belong to you.

And to make certain there was no violation of this rule, a guard was put by the trees and shrubs, and a dog was given to pace with him so there would be no challenge.

So the trees and shrubs laid there by the roadside, and the man surrendered them with only a question: "Why?"

END OF FABLE II.

We read and we hear much these days about dissent, turmoil and protest, of mobs and of individuals flailing at that inhuman monolith of many labels — bureaucracy, the establishment, the system.

Often we don't understand the turmoil, and often we can't, because often it seems so pointless and so misdirected, and sometimes so violent and ugly that it repels us.

But then you read fables like these — not fables at all — and stare the system straight in its red tape.

You may lament a little then over the people who don't protest, but who should, and you may wonder: How much do we count?

Scrimmage Lines

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

Sebring—1969

For 360 days out of the year Sebring is a little town nestled quietly away in the central part of Florida.

It is a serene town surrounded by orange groves and small truck farms. The people are genuine country folk who talk, walk and act slowly like, what's the hurry?

For 360 days even the folks in Pahokee, Okeechobee, Immokalee and Indiantown don't give a ding-dong-dash about what is going on in Sebring. Sebring is given a lot of attention and richly deserves it.

But for five days in late March, Sebring is a spoken word in Rome, London, Paris, Melbourne, Brussels and Madrid. You see, Sebring is the opener of the road racing World Series.

The series opens with the Sebring 12 Hours of Endurance, then moves to Targa-Florio in Italy. The third step is the Nurburgring 1000 kilometer race in Germany. And the climatic finish is none other than the 24 Hours of LeMans.

In recent years the Daytona Continental 24 Hour has made strides toward becoming the opening event in the world series but it is still considered somewhat of a "spring training."

Since I have never been to Europe I have not seen the final three legs of the world series. But I have seen to the Sebring 12 Hour and it is easy to understand why the race is the most popular road race in the United States.

Don't confuse road racing with oval racing. The Indianapolis 500 has been given far more recognition and acclaim than Sebring but the 500 is run on an oval track. At Indianapolis the cars go around a two-mile track 150 times and there is not too much variety in the racing action.

But Sebring — Sebring is run on a course with long and short straights, difficult turns and successive and tricky bends and generally requires more car-handling ability than any oval race course. This is not to say that the Indianapolis 500 is any breeze but drivers are quick to say that Grand Prix racing, such as it is Sebring which requires at least 30 gear changes and 11 brakings over a 5.2 mile course for 12 hours, just has to be more difficult.

The Sebring Endurance race lasts 12 hours. But to the fans it begins long before. To the die-hard veteran, Sebring is a 100-hour affair. To the veterans it is not the 12 hours of Sebring but instead the 100 hours of Sebring.

The race officially begins on a Saturday (March 22 of this year) but the hard-core fans begin arriving the Wednesday before — fortified with only one set of clothes, four bottles of sun tan lotion, plenty of food and a good four cases of beer. At Sebring beer ranks second only to the race itself in popularity.

From Wednesday afternoon through Saturday morning the fans, mostly in the 17-30 year-old age group, make their way to the Sebring infield. By the start of the race at 11 a.m. Saturday, 65,000 people, some racing fans and some not, will have made their arrival to the track — an old abandoned airport.

For 100 hours, old acquaintances are reunited as people come from as far away as Hawaii, Europe and, yes, Arlington Heights, to take in the race.

While the cars and drivers are struggling to qualify for a starting post in the race, the 65,000 are sitting back, recalling old times, other Sebrings, new marriages and babies, throwing the football around, watching the race and, more than anything else, drinking beer. (The Sebring police department and the Florida Highway Patrol seem to look the other way when a person under 21 is drinking beer. The police department figures this is one time of the year to let the kids have a little fun. As long as the kids are not destroying things or each other the police do not interfere with the proceedings).

TOP GRADE CATCHER. Ernie Purcell is one of the top-rated catchers in the Mid-Suburban League, a league which is loaded with good catchers. Purcell hit the ball at a .256 clip and is a fine defensive backstop. Purcell and his Palatine teammates will open their season Wednesday against Lake Park at home at 4:15 p.m.—weather permitting, of course.

By three o'clock Saturday morning Sebring is a deathly quiet place as the 65,000 rest — on the ground, in cars, in the back of pickup trucks and in tents — preparing for the big endurance coming up.

And with the first popping of a beer can at day-break Saturday, Sebring's Longest Day is underway.

Slowly but steadily the 65,000 arouse themselves, in a wide variety of conditions (hungover and otherwise), secure a place for a vantage view of the track, prepare (or beg) breakfast, awaiting the beginning of the race at 11 a.m.

When the starter begins the race by waving the flag, 70 drivers dash for their respective cars on the opposite side of the track, ignite their engines and go on their way until 11 p.m. For some drivers the start can be an embarrassing situation as it was to comedian Dickie Smothers who couldn't get his Porsche started until every other car had left the starting grid.

For 12 hours the cars, with engines measuring from 1,300 to 3,000 cubic centimeters (which is a little bigger than your wife's sedan), roar around the track all but drowning out the voice of the announcer who tries to reach 65,000 fans over 15 square miles through loudspeakers. Thus, most of the 65,000 have a difficult time trying to figure out who was winning the race though some are so sick, loaded and sunburned that they don't give a hot-diggity anyway.

For those who happened to be there but haven't gotten the results yet, Porsche led the first 30 laps, a Lola-Chevy led for 25 laps, Ferrari led for most of the race and a Ford GT-40 driven by Jackie Ickx and Jack Oliver won the race by leading only the last 45 minutes.

After the checkered flag is taken the 65,000 head back to their resting places, looking forward to the long trip home Sunday.

Sunday morning little is said, most are extremely quiet (and now definitely hung-over as the 750,000 beer cans lying around can testify). They climb aboard their trucks, jeeps and cars and head for home.

By Sunday afternoon, the town of Sebring is itself once again — quiet, serene and in slow-motion.

Until next year.

Weight Machines Popular Hercules Taking Over...

WEIGHT MACHINE GAINS IN POPULARITY
Hersey Student Tom Anderson in Workout

by KEITH REINHARD

Is the strong man of the circus side show about to lose his tools of trade?

Perhaps Barnum and Bailey is a strong final bastion for loin cloth and big black dumbbell. Even on this traditional stage though the implement with the huge round weights is losing ground fast to a new device in operation at Hersey High School.

Hersey is one of five schools in District 214 and one location among literally hundreds in the Midwest now owning or in the process of obtaining a Hercules weight machine. A revolutionary piece of equipment which has been on the market for nearly 10 years, it has hit the Chicagoland area by storm of late and promises to completely eliminate those cumbersome weights and bars once considered a necessity for building up muscle power.

THE WEIGHT MACHINE is an odd looking creature to the passing observer. Taking on the appearance of a metal tree stump that's still trying to grow outward in about 40 different directions, it is actually an intricately yet ruggedly designed system that can cater to as many as 10 people simultaneously.

And in an era where athletic ability is based as much on conditioning as it is on size and native talent, the weight machine has a definite place in any school's sports program.

Len Burt, Huskie football coach and a specialist in developing weight men for track and field, echoes the sentiments of many in the body building business: "The weight machine has really been a boon to our physical education and sports programs here. I'm all in favor of it not just because of its efficiency, but in considering the safety factor as well."

BOTH FEATURES are obvious once an individual has had the time to size up the machine. Not only are there ten different stations, each designed to tone up a different set of muscles, the amount of resistance at the various positions can be changed with about as much effort as it takes to turn on a light switch.

And despite the weight — about 3,000 pounds — and the seemingly awkward style of the device, it can be moved from one location to another by just one man.

Safety is evident inasmuch as all weights remain within the framework of the machine. Furthermore, the stations have been designed to prevent related injuries to such as the neck or back.

AMONG THE various positions on the Hercules weight machine are a leg press with resistance of up to 750 pounds and chest and shoulder press areas where one can lift up to 220 pounds. Special attachments can increase these hefty figures even further when called for.

There is also a position for building up knee and thigh muscles, a quad and upper body station, a high lat pull, an abdominal conditioner, a hip flexor, a chinning station and a dipping station.

"Its versatility is extremely important to our numerous athletic programs," stated Burt. "Different sports call for emphasis on different muscle systems. There are also many cases where an athlete is strong in some areas but needs development of other sets of muscles."

"In any event," he concluded, "this machine has the user getting a workout in precisely the area he requires it."

HERSEY HAD THEIR weight machine barely after the gym went into operation and grid and baseball coach Steve Chucky headed up a weight program there during the winter months. Now cinders under the direction of Burt and some of the other track coaches are logging miles of the after school hours.

During school, of course, the machine doesn't remain idle. Hersey, like most schools has a weight phase within its physical education program. Rich St. Clair, regional distributor of the unit, notes that a class of 30 can be run through it in a period of just 16 minutes.

This summer plans are underway to conduct yet another weight program, directed by wrestling mentor Tom Porter. Girls too have worked out on the equipment and Burt duly observes: "It's been such a success here that we're in hopes of getting another one sometime in the future."

GETTING ANOTHER one would mean another $2,200 investment for Hersey. It's a sum which has already been produced by practically every professional football team, a great many colleges and other such varied organizations as police and fire departments, hospital rehabilitation programs, YMCAs, private health spas and gyms and recreation centers. "Up until recently," said St. John, "The government was our biggest customer."

Over 25 Hercules weight machines are in operation at military installations in South Viet Nam alone, St. John pointed out.

Locally, Forest View, Arlington, Prospect and Wheeling either have one ordered or already on the premises. Other area schools have expressed a strong interest in obtaining one.

Falcons' New Tennis Coach Hopeful

The city of Arlington Heights could be well represented in the Mid-Suburban League tennis wars if some flashy Forest View sophomores adjust fast enough as juniors this spring.

At least that is the hope of Forest View's new head racket coach, Doug Tolman, as his team — barring a rain or snow storm — takes to the courts in the season opener at Glenbrook North today at 4:30 p.m.

He takes over a squad that will have only one returning senior — Mike Kinneman — along with some very capable juniors and sophomores.

"THEY SHOULD be able to hold their own and do a pretty good job," said Tolman. "I'm looking forward to their getting a lot of experience this year and, with a couple of breaks, we could be right up there."

"Arlington, of course, is the team to beat. And I think Hersey got some good guys from Wheeling... they might be a real surprise."

The Falcons are young and need varsity experience but the calibre of greatness is there.

"They nosed out Arlington and won the conference," Tolman recalled, but he added, "Varsity play is a little different."

JOINING Kinneman, who just completed a fine hardcourt year by being named to the all-conference team, will be these champs from last year — juniors Fred Melone, Scott Vaughn and Bill Joyce and sophomores Dick Martin and Kurt Buckholz. These five helped the frosh-soph team fashion a very strong 9-2 overall record.

The Falcon mentor added that he was thinking about making these two sophomores into his second doubles combination. He said he still hadn't made up his mind on which two would handle No. 1 doubles.

Tolman takes over the head job from Roger Steingraber who moved on to the head basketball duties at Hersey last year. Steingraber had guided the Falcons to a very successful campaign before leaving — third in the conference (5-2) and a very fine 9-3 overall mark.

BUT TOLMAN has had to face challenges before. The last two years he was the head man at Fremd. The Vikings' opening year in tennis they only won two of 11 but they improved last year to a 5-9 record.

Before going to Fremd Tolman had gotten his first coaching assignment at Palatine where he had a very impressive 12-2 opening year and a respectable 8-6 second term.

"Last year the conference was pretty evenly matched between four teams (Arlington, Wheeling, Forest View and Prospect)," said Tolman. "It will probably be the same again."

He figured that Prospect would be a very even matchup to his boys. Last year the Falcons edged out the Knights for third and Wheeling nipped the Falcons for second.

Pirate Baseball Outlook Optimistic

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

In his first season as Palatine High's head baseball coach, Ray Schodtler is loaded with optimism.

"I think this has the makings of a fine ball club," he said.

The ingredients for a good team are speed, defense, pitching and hitting and Palatine rates right up there in every category with the other squads in the Mid-Suburban League.

For speed he can call on lead-off man Chris Andriano, who at 130 pounds is as swift as any coach could want. Rick Lehnert and Scott Smith can also swipe the bases.

SCHODTLER considers the defense to be Palatine's strong point this year with experience at every position as 10 letterman return from last year's team.

For hitters Schodtler has three of 1968's top 20 hitters coming back in Dave Hasbach, Al Bambrick and Ernie Purcell.

And for pitchers, Schodtler is envied by nearly every other coach in the league because he has a top-notch corps headed by Hasbach and John Dempster and backed up by Pat Doyle and Bob Sander.

SCHODTLER FEELS that his front-line team does not have to take a back seat to anybody but he realizes that his bench must improve. "At the present time," he said, "we can't afford any injuries or the flu. I'm hoping that our other boys improve in case anything happens."

For bench strength Schodtler is looking to Doug Wolfe, Tom Matsie, Sander and Ron McAllister.

The Palatine coach has his starting lineup all settled. Bambrick, who hit .286 and was second in the league with 11 runs batted in, will be at first base. Rick Lehnert, who should improve on his .154 average, will be at second and Roger Outcalt will play shortstop. Scott Smith, a 290 hitter (which isn't bad in high school ball), will be at third.

THE OUTFIELD will be manned by two letterman, Andriano and Greg Duffy, but the third spot is open for grabs when Hasbach is pitching. Hasbach, a solid 303 hitter, will play right field when not on the mound.

Behind the plate will be Ernie Purcell who hit .256 and might be All-Conference in any other league. It just so happens that the MSL is loaded with good catchers but Purcell will be giving it a try to land post-season honors.

Hasbach had a 2-3 record last year while Dempster was 2-4 and Doyle 0-1. But they were the victim of a poor Palatine team batting average of .198. The hitting should be much better this spring and the pitchers' records should improve.

WITH SNOW, rain and cold weather, Schodtler has not had his players out on the field very often and he has been forced to conduct practice in the gymnasium... using a whiffle ball instead of the regular hard ball. "The whiffle ball moves around a lot," he said, "and I think it can get them to keep their eyes on the ball and meet the ball."

"I really think for as little practice as we've had that we're looking pretty good."

Schodtler was Palatine's sophomore baseball coach last year and admits he had not seen enough teams to make an efficient pre-season rating. However, he did say that Arlington and Wheeling should be the teams to beat. The Pirates will open their season at home against

As for his own team, Schodtler feels that it should be in the thick of the pennant fight. You see, he has some speed, some defense, some pitching and some hitting on his squad. What else is needed?

BUNNIES ARE FOR KIDS, and no one knows it better than wistful little boys. Easter rabbits with ears as big as 5-year-olds populate Randhurst Shopping Center this week.

He Fears 'Decline and Fall' of U.S.

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI)—Crime psychiatrist Dr. James A. Brussel fears that today's wide disregard for law and authority is the beginning of "the decline and fall of the United States."

And it isn't only so-called "criminals" Dr. Brussel is concerned about. It's almost all of us from the campus rebel to the indulgent parent to the fellow who tries to put one over on the income tax collector.

The 64-year-old New Yorker came into unexpected nationwide publicity this month at the California trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan for the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. One of the defense psychologists quoted portions of Dr. Brussel's book, "Casebook of a Crime Psychiatrist," published last September, almost verbatim in some portions of his testimony.

It developed in an interview, however, that at this stage the psychiatrist-author is less disturbed by individual crimes than he is by general attitudes in today's society. As he sees it, the attitudes that worry him have been building since the 1920's prohibition era.

"What we have today is youth rebelling against authority. It is basic that authority implies that which pertains to right and wrong. We learn the fundamentals of right and wrong from the moment we are born—for our parents. Usually, what our parents teach is what society accepts."

Dr. Brussel, thin, bearded, his forehead frown-creased, traces the breakdown back to prohibition when parents had their own bootleggers and almost everyone openly disobeyed the law.

Then came World War II, he said, "and Mama worked the swing shift, Daddy worked a double shift, and the kids shifted for themselves."

"In school the kids learned that everyone must give up something for his country as his patriotic duty."

"Then on Sunday Daddy took the family for a drive. Ask him where he got the gas (ration) stamps, and he said he knew a man. Mommy served steak for dinner. Ask her where she got the meat stamps and she said she knew somebody."

He pointed out that it was the children of those days who are today's parents.

"Where is the respect for authority today when authority—that is, the parent—turns around and himself has no respect for authority?" Dr. Brussel asked.

"Where is it when the teacher, the cop, the social worker, goes on strike and acts illegally?"

And what are today's youngsters to think, he continued, when two million people deliberately gyp on their income tax, when "the highest father in the land," the Supreme Court, ordered desegregation of schools 14 years ago and schools remain segregated.

"The child today sits in a car beside his father, an ordinary, God-fearing respectable upright citizen, who is driving home late at night, sees no policemen or anyone else on the road, and drives 65 instead of at the 50 mile an hour speed limit.

"He is just as much a criminal as a killer or burglar—it's just a matter of the degree of the crime. And when the kid asks him about the speed limit, the father says, 'so what—there's nobody around.'"

"I'm awfully afraid we're seeing the decline and fall of the United States."

Please Don't Scorn the Tuba

By MARGARET MCGOVERN
WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—A long-suffering tubist has the perfect answer for those who cast aspersions on his horn. He says the tuba may be responsible for the "oom" but the "pah" belongs to the French horn.

Ronald Apperson, who is the tuba faculty at Hartt School of Music of the University of Hartford, said most people mistake the tuba for the Sousaphone, which renders the "oom-pah" in marching parades although the difference is like that between Filet of Sole Cleopatra and tuna on toast.

Apperson, 32, lives in suburban Granby in a split-level house especially chosen so he could play his tuba in the basement without disturbing his wife and infant daughter. He said he doesn't disturb the neighbors, but it wasn't always like that.

In 1965, Apperson, who was then living in a Hartford apartment was ordered by his bagpipe-playing superintendent to cut out the tooting or take his brass elsewhere because of complaints from irate neighbors. He relocated rather than hang up his tuba which he regards as a "serious instrument" and "no joke."

"A lot of music has been written for the tuba but not much of it is very good because it makes a joke out of the instrument," he said. However, he said you can have "a lot of fun" with it in pieces such as the ones written by Leroy Anderson, who composes primarily for trumpet and has a horse whinny at the end of "Sleighride."

Because there is a lack of good literature for the tuba, the music student is faced with inferior arrangements and

"there's no challenge so he gives up," Apperson said.

Many people just don't know what it can do musically, which is a lot, he said. "Although it has the same range as the Sousaphone, named after the march king, John Philip Sousa, one is a delicate instrument that you can be musical on and the other is not a very thankful instrument at all," he said.

A native of Portland, Ore., Apperson has fully manned the Hartt tuba staff since 1964. He plays full time with the Hartford Symphony and part time with the Springfield (Mass.) Symphony.

He describes the horn as exuding a mellow sound, similar to the French horn but lower in pitch. The tuba, which retails in the United States at $1,200, according to the teacher, is the youngest of the brass instruments.

It evolved in 1835 when craftsmen learned how to manufacture and mold brass in a thinner way and produce better valves. It is really a large, low trumpet, Apperson said.

Although he contends it is a sensitive instrument, he said many students, especially female ones, are turned off by the tuba because of its size.

However, he said his own tuba was a "small one that sits on my lap very comfortably."

Touting the tooting, Apperson said "there's a legitimate career in tuba playing since the Ford Foundation issued $80 million for orchestra development." The funding allows each symphony to have at least one tuba in its ranks, he said.

After all, you can't leave that "pah" hanging.

7 Dist. 15 Students

Win In Science Fair

Dist. 15 had seven students, who prepared four projects, take home first place medals in the science fair area finals at Wheeling High School.

The winners were Roger Alexander, Troy Lethem, Edward Hume and James Palmer of Stuart R. Packlock School; Mark Evenson of Carl Sandburg School, and Sharon Wolfe and Claudia Fersch of Winston Park School.

Alexander and Lethem presented a project on internal combustion engines. Hume and Palmer's project dealt with transistors, and Evenson prepared a project on meteorological instruments.

Miss Wolfe and Miss Fersch had a project dealing with the miracle of life.

120 Medals Won

William Fremd High School students won 120 medals at the State Solo and Ensemble Contest, held recently at Round Lake.

Medals included 75 for superior ratings and 45 for excellent.

Kunowski Is Assigned

Airman Robert M. Kunowski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard R. Kunowski of 862 Holly Way, Palatine, has completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

He has been assigned to Keesler AFB, Miss., for training in communications electronics systems.

Airman Kunowski is a graduate of Fremd High School.

War For Good Housing Far From Won

By ARNOLD S. WISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The twofold national housing goal of a decent place to live for every American family by 1978 is troubling the new Republican administration.

In his outgoing budget message this year, President Lyndon B. Johnson reminded Congress that the housing acts of 1949 and 1968 had committed the nation to eliminate substandard housing.

This national commitment will require construction or rehabilitation of 26 million homes or apartments during the period 1968-78, including 6 million decent homes and apartments at prices or rents that families with low or moderate incomes can afford," Johnson said.

He also said the 1969 and 1970 federal budgets carried the funds to meet the government's responsibility to build or subsidize 700,000 housing units for poor and middle income families in the first two years of the 10-year program.

But two weeks later, George Romney, President Nixon's secretary of housing and urban development (HUD) got on the record with some doubts about the means he had been provided with to meet these goals.

In terms of need, Romney said, "the 26 million goal appears as sound statistically as any you can develop. Now, I don't think the programs that we have at the present time will achieve these goals. I think the talk has been much bigger than the performance."

Romney added that one of the first tasks he was giving himself was to figure out how much housing actually could be provided with the available resources and what would be needed to meet the goals.

When these and similar statements were interpreted as meaning that Romney was preparing to retreat on the national housing goals, he said no such thing was true. He said the problem was "organization of the available resources" and it was his firm intention to do that, as his Democratic predecessors had not, to meet the goals.

But Romney's first statements evoked some rumblings from Capitol Hill and they seem likely to continue at least until he spells out his own approach in more detail.

The first response came from Sen. William Proxmire, second-ranking Democratic member of the Senate Banking Committee and its housing subcommittee.

"I hope that the Nixon Administration will not adopt a policy of despair or permit a defeatist attitude to weaken the national commitment to better housing," the Wisconsin senator wrote Romney.

He reminded the secretary that HUD itself submitted detailed statistics to Congress last year concluding that the housing goals written into the 1968 law were feasible, and that at least three studies by outside groups had endorsed HUD's findings.

In the context of the Nixon Administration's unspoken but clearly apparent policy of trying to avoid a "promise gap," Romney's theme is understandable.

And in view of the federal government's past record in the low income housing field—under Democratic as well as Republican administrations—the HUD secretary might be regarded as no more than sensibly realistic.

The National Commission on Urban Problems, which worked for two years under former Sen. Paul Douglas to determine housing and other needs of the cities, slated the record this way:

"Congress in the housing act of 1949 agreed that the country required 135,000 new public housing units a year for the next six years, or a total of 810,000 units. We have not produced that much in 30 years of public housing. Since proclaiming that goal in 1949, we have produced only about 500,000 units, or about two-thirds of the six-year goal in 20 years!"

The President's Committee on Urban

Housing, headed by industrialist Edgar Kaiser, offered one explanation for the government's public housing flop since 1949: "Generalized expressions of the nation's good intentions, addressed to no particular responsible agency and including no specific goals for specific dates, have a way of being overlooked, forgotten (and) unfulfilled."

Public housing, as well as the fistful of other new subsidy programs intended to stimulate private investment in housing for the poor, must compete with hundreds of other government programs for money from the Treasury's general fund.

In his budget, Johnson outlined a program for the 1969 and 1970 fiscal years that is supposed to produce 736,000 new rehabilitated units of low and middle income housing. The two-year outlay would be just over $2 billion.

The program includes 75,000 units of low rent public housing in the 1969 fiscal year that ends June 30, and 120,000 units in the following 12 months. In contrast, there were 51,000 public housing units produced in the 1968 fiscal year.

Various subsidy programs, aimed at investors as well as low income renters and homeowners, are supposed to provide the remainder of the 233,000 unit total in the current fiscal year which ends June 30 and the 503,000 units projected for fiscal 1970.

According to a HUD projection, the number of new and rehabilitated "publicly assisted" housing units should rise to 600,000 in 1973 and peak at 800,000 in 1976. By 1978, the target date for the 10-year goal of 6 million units, the publicly assisted housing starts will have settled back to 700,000 units a year.

While the government is doing all this, private enterprise is supposed to be producing 20 million new and renovated homes. According to HUD's projections, this will rise from a 1.7 million unit level in 1970 to 2.8 million units in 1978. By comparison, private housing starts hit about 1.5 million last year.

Are such increases in housing production a planner's pipe dream? Just last year, in an analysis prepared for the Senate Banking Committee, HUD said "... The 10-year goals, while not easy to achieve, represent realistic, attainable goals."

HUD touched on each of the key elements involved in meeting the goals—money, manpower and materials. It said a study of the mortgage market indicated the required funds "probably would be available"; that the construction manpower needs, which would nearly double by the end of the decade, could be met by new workers coming into the market; and that building materials "should prove to be no problem" in seeking the housing goals.

The Kaiser commission reviewed HUD's findings and reported: "Considering all factors, we firmly believe that the costs of meeting the President's housing goals are well within the productive and economic capacities of the nation."

If HUD and the outside experts were saying "can do" in 1968, how can Romney support a contrary conclusion less than a year later?

For one thing, Romney can cite the congressional history of setting big goals and providing small appropriations for housing, especially for the poor.

Rent supplements, which were supposed to help ease the shortage of publicly-owned housing for the poor and middle income families, is one prime example. Congress authorized $108 million for the program in fiscal 1969. Of this amount the Johnson Administration asked for only $65 million for the year, but then Congress came across with only $30 million.

Model Cities had authorization for $1 billion in 1969 and that's what the administration sought. It got $625 million. Only the conventional public housing program fared relatively well in Congress last year. It suffered only an $8 million cut from its $358 million authorization.

Besides the usual problems with getting money out of Congress, Romney also may be looking at some ominous signs in the private sector.

Local Students On Rockford List

Three young men from Palatine have been named to the dean's list at Rockford College.

Stewart Shepherd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Shepherd of 1120 E. Patten Drive, is a junior majoring in economics.

Jeffrey Lind, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lind of 451 Comfort Lane, is a senior sociology major at Rockford. He is a 1965 graduate of Palatine High School.

Robert Birss, a senior majoring in classics and English, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Birss of 236 Briarwood Lane.

'Jim Nabors South' Is The Nice One

By VERNON SCOTT
By VERNON SCOTT UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Comedian Jim Nabors dropped his Gomer Pyle accent long enough to broadcast a denial that he is a dissident, militarist or a strident anything.

Recently a resident of the San Francisco area has been making news at the Berkeley campus of the University of California by accusing the state government of the establishment, law enforcement agencies and the governor of a good many things—none of them good.

What troubles the television star is that this fiery northern Californian bears the name Jim Nabors.

Nabors, north has been arrested, much to the chagrin of Nabors south who hasn't even done stockade duty as the fictional Marine.

"Every time this fella up there makes news it's printed in the papers," Nabors complained. "Sometimes the stories get carried clear across the country. "But none of the newspaper accounts say there are two different Jim Nabors. This fella up there gets put in jail every week or so, and some papers print the news thinking it's me."

Nabors said that he has received letters abusing him for his stand in Berkeley. Other mail has come in addressed to Gomer Pyle, deprecating his behavior.

"I'm a graduate of the University of Alabama," Nabors said. "I haven't got anything against the University of California."

"Come to think of it I'm not mad at any university. Another thing, I never get mixed up in politics. Haven't called Governor Reagan or anybody else bad names either. "And I certainly don't believe in burning down schools. But this other fella, he's got a lot on his mind and he keeps speaking up."

Nabors said he doesn't object to free speech. What he wants to do is alert the citizenry to the fact that any activity in Berkeley is totally unrelated to him.

There is no connection between Nabors north and the fact that Nabors south is leaving his "Gomer Pyle" series to launch a musical variety hour next fall.

"I think five years of doing Gomer was enough," Nabors explained. "We were always right up there in the top five. And it's a good idea to step out while you're at the top."

Jim's new show, "Friends and Nabors," will include some Gomer Pyle sketches with Frank Sutton as Sergeant Carter. He also has signed guest stars Andy Griffith, Carol Burnett, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Glen Campbell, Rock Hudson, Minnie Pearl and Kay Starr.

Nabors south definitely will not invite Nabors north to be a guest.

"I just wish that everyone would differentiate between the two of us," he concluded. "Maybe run a picture of both of us."

Might work. Nabors north is black and Nabors south is white.

Women Discuss Prejudice

"My name is Shana Lowitz. I am a wife, a mother and a Jew. My husband Don and I have three children. Our daughter Amy is a sophomore in high school and our sons Josh and Ted are in first and seventh grades."

And so ran similar introductions by three other women. Jean Kiskadden introduced herself as white, anglo-saxon and Protestant. Margaret Beck referred to herself as a Roman Catholic. And Delores Scott presented herself as an Afro-American.

This was no role-playing session. The ladies were members of "The Panel of American Women," a grass-roots anti-prejudice group with panels throughout the United States. They are conducted under auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

LAST THURSDAY AT St. Simon Episcopal Church in Arlington Heights they spoke candidly of their personal experiences with prejudice. Following their five-minute narrations the panel was opened to questions from the audience.

Establishing a common ground with their audience, the women emphasized that they were not experts, but simply housewives and mothers concerned about human relations. They were articulate as panelists and forthright in answering questions.

Jean Kiskadden identified a stumbling block in successful human relationships by referring to her own youth and family, stating, "The prejudice we felt was insidious because it was so well covered with good manners."

IN ANSWER TO A woman who inquired about the basis of anti-Semitism, Shana Lowitz replied that not only had churches taught it for a long time (by attributing the responsibility of Christ's death to the Jews, but that the problem had an economic basis as well).

In parts of Europe Jews were refused admission into professions, and few other occupations were left them but the roles of money-lender and tax collector.

"And who loves his tax collector?" she laughed.

Delores Scott was asked whether she thought her children would encounter less prejudice than she grew up with. She replied, "Although the physical shackles have been removed, the psychological and economic bonds are still there... covered by politeness in some."

MRS. SCOTT ALSO stressed the importance of separatism ("a voluntary condition") as distinct from segregation ("a condition imposed by a power structure"). "When a people is trying to accomplish its rebirth, it is a personal thing," she explained.

"This self-knowledge, this awareness of who we are and what our values are can only be done by ourselves. Thus, separation must take place before true integration can occur," she concluded.

A question asked in a variety of ways by many women illustrated their sympathetic response to the panel and its soft approach to open-mindedness. That question dealt with what women could do as individuals to improve human relationships.

In response to the woman who indicated she felt insignificant as one person against existing prejudice and ill will, Delores Scott drew a few quick laughs: "Don't underestimate woman power — it's as strong as Black Power."

SHANA LOWITZ added that she sincerely believed time was running out — that one shouldn't minimize what the individual could do.

"Remind people that generalizations cannot describe individuals. Find out how the textbooks your children are using in school treat history. One voice can be heard. It's like a pebble dropped in a pool of water which sends out ripples far beyond the initial splash," she observed.

Highlighting the importance of involvement on any level, personal or group, Mrs. Bernard Verin, moderator, quoted a sign she has observed on trucks around the city: "If you're not part of the solution, you must be part of the problem."

Frenchman Will Speak To Palatine Juniors

A French exchange student will bring foreign flavor to tonight's (Tuesday's) meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Palatine at 8 in Christ Lutheran Church, Palatine.

Muse Gilles Duthu of Rennes, Ile et Vilaine, France, will compare life in France with his impressions of this country. The young Frenchman is a graduate student at De Paul University on a Rotary Foundation fellowship. He received bachelor's degrees in economics and business administration at the University of Rennes, France.

Further information concerning the program may be obtained from Mrs. Robert Bowles at 3-8-4899.

Funds for Charity

The Rolling Meadows Junior Woman's Club has earmarked $100 checks to the Northwest Mental Health Association and the Clearbrook Center for Retarded Children as part of its 1969 philanthropic work.

Weschler intelligence scale tests will be purchased with the Clearbrook appropriation.

The club's community achievement committee is also constructing educational aids for the children at the center.

Make Idle Window a Desk Job

What can you do about an unused window, the kind that's curtained all day for privacy or to screen an unsightly view?

If the window isn't needed for air or light, why not remove the sash, cover the opening outside with siding, and convert the window area to working space?

The ex-window could become a small writing desk, with bookshelving built above, in the recess.

After removing the window's working parts, add new pieces of wood along the two inner sides of the framing, plus supports for the shelves. You'll need eight-inch-wide shelves. They'll project a bit beyond the window casing, but will look right if you cut the shelf ends to overlap the casing one inch on either side.

THE DESK top should be 28 or 30 inches above the floor. If the inside sill (stool) is 30 inches high, it's easiest to slip the desk top right underneath it. First remove the old window apron, then flush the upper surfaces of inside and outside sills to make a handy ledge over the desk top.

The desk can be a shallow box with side-by-side pencil drawers. Mount it to the wall with molly screws.

To make the entire job extra attractive, double the width of the casing by adding a new piece around it. Carry the new piece of casing down to the baseboard on either side of the desk unit.

Wood Beams Add Heat

Why are beamed, wood-paneled ceilings so popular today? Designers say it's the quickest way to warm a room. Generally, wood ceilings are finished clear to take advantage of their golden glow and minimum maintenance. But paint also is effective on wood planks and beams.

Sorority Activities

CRF Film for New Sorority Chapter

EPSILON SIGMA ALPHA
Mrs. E. L. Getting, 522 S. Bristol, will be hostess for the Wednesday, April 9 meeting of the Alpha Nu chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha. The 8 p.m. meeting is open to ESA members, their guests and others interested in membership in Epsilon Sigma Alpha.

A film, sponsored by the Children's Research Foundation will be shown. This Foundation helps provide funds for research into the causes and cures of children's diseases.

At present the CRF is in need of funds to help in purchasing equipment. One of the most recent purchases was a newly-developed instrument which makes it possible to project on a screen visible to a large audience, moving pictures taken of chest x-rays which show the heart in action.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha is a service sorority which has "aid the handicapped" as its national project. Alpha Nu will be the newest chapter in Illinois when it is chartered April 23. Membership won't be closed until that night and women 18 years or older and high school graduates are invited to call Mrs. Allan Schoeld, field director, for more information. Her number is 529-9666.

BETA SIGMA PHI
Kappa Kappa, a chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, will hold a membership meeting of the Arlington Heights - Rolling Meadows - Des Plaines area Thursday, April 3 at 8:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Donald Barrett, 402 N. Douglas, Arlington Heights. All interested women are invited.

The sorority is a non-academic group which provides cultural and educational programs, sponsors benevolent projects and has social activities for members and guests.

Details are available from Mrs. M. Moudry, 392-7855, or Mrs. Barrett, 392-0078.

KAPPA DELTA
Proceeds from "Emerald Mist" totaled more than $800 according to Northwest Suburban Kappa Delta Alumnae who sponsored the Jance March 8 in Arlington Heights Elks Club.

Benefiting from the dance will be the Klingberg School for Mentally Retarded Children in Wauconda and the Countryside Center for the Handicapped in Palatine. Outdoor play equipment for Klingberg and educational equipment for Countryside will be purchased.

A contribution will also be given to Kappa Delta's national philanthropy, the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Va. in honor of the late Phyllis Lines, a member of the northwest suburban chapter. The funds will be designated as the Phyllis Lines Memorial Fund.

Ogilvie Woos New Tax

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is expected to ask for a state income tax, a temporary one-cent increase in the state sales tax, and hikes in two or more other existing taxes in his budget message today.

Ogilvie's budget message will be precedent setting in that he will be the first governor in state history to submit a one-year, rather than a two-year budget.

Ike on Last Journey

WASHINGTON — A 21-gun salute sounded through the cavernous Union Station Monday as the 10-car funeral train for Dwight David Eisenhower, general of the army and 34th President of the United States, began the long journey to the plains of Kansas.

The train will arrive at midnight today in Abilene. The former president will be buried in the tiny all-faith chapel named Place of Meditation, next to his son, Dwight Doud Eisenhower, who died at the age of 7.

Milton in Hospital

WASHINGTON — Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late President, was admitted to Walter Reed Army Medical Center Monday "for observation."

The manager's office at the Washington Hilton Hotel said the 69-year-old president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University complained of not feeling well and asked to be hospitalized for a checkup. In Baltimore, George S. Wills, information director of Johns Hopkins, stressed the hospitalization is purely precautionary.

Obtain A-Plant Land

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie has announced the state has completed acquisition of 6,800 acres at $25.5 million for the atomic accelerator in the Weston area.

Ray Dickerson, director of the Department of Business and Economic Development, said title to the land will be conveyed to the Atomic Energy Commission in the "very near future."

Firms Late Tax Hit

SPRINGFIELD — A crackdown on business firms delinquent in filing returns for use, retailers and service occupation taxes has been announced by State Revenue Director George Mahin. He sent letters to all retailers pointing out tax returns are due by the last day of each month following the month for which the tax liability is incurred.

Mahin said a taxpayer enforcement program against taxpayers who are two months delinquent will begin today.

Sirhan Trial Resumes

LOS ANGELES — The trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan for the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy resumes today with a prosecution psychiatrist, Dr. Seymour Pollack, on the witness stand. The case will probably go to the jury of seven men and five women next week.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the cost to the county to date to insure a fair trial for the 25-year-old defendant was $250,000. It is estimated the total cost will run to $1 million.

North Viets Rebuild

SAIGON — U.S. sources with access to intelligence reports and aerial photos said North Vietnam has completely repaired the damage inflicted by American bombers in the air war that former President Lyndon B. Johnson began scaling down exactly one year ago.

Other reports from North Vietnam said the country is suffering from food deficiencies and that a general manpower shortage is contributing to industrial shortcomings.

1,500 Ready to March

More than 1,500 local young people have already signed up to trek from Park Ridge to Rolling Meadows in Friday's Hike for the Hungry benefit.

David Wurm, youth minister at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect and a march coordinator, estimates that as many as 8,000 to 10,000 sponsors may be backing the hike.

Wurm says the number may swell by tomorrow, the last day to register for the march.

Sponsors will be contributing anywhere from 5 cents to $10 a mile to the Hike for the Hungry's three benefit organizations — Biafran relief, an Ecuadorian farm project and the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

Mark Severs of Arlington Heights, publicity chairman for the youth-sponsored project, says Prospect High School so far holds the registration record — 180 students. At Conant High School in Hoffman Estates, well off the march route, more than 100 students have been recruited by Charrie Kamin.

LAST NIGHT, student volunteers converged on Trinity Lutheran Church, Des Plaines, to paint signs that some of the marchers will carry. Another group gathered at St. Paul's Church in Mount Prospect to make armbands that will serve as the hikers' identification. "Down with Hunger" and "Soul Power" will be typical of signs the marchers will carry, Severs says.

Adult volunteers who will help with the march will be briefed tonight at 8 at St. Paul's.

Hike coordinators estimate that 200 adults will be needed to assist along the march route. The adults will be serving as parade marshals, as crossing guards, or manning checkpoints where students can have their progress recorded — or let their parents know they're giving up.

The 18-mile parade route will follow few major streets.

Police in the six towns and cities along the route — Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows — helped hike coordinators pick a route that would tie up auto traffic as little as possible.

THE FUNDS DONATED by sponsors will be split three ways. A third will go to the Northwest Opportunity Center, a self-help agency working with Northwest suburban low income families — many of them Spanish-speaking migrants or ex-migrants.

Another third will be channeled through the United Nations to the International Red Cross, transporting agency for all food and medical relief sent to starving and ill residents of warring Biafra and Nigeria.

Wurm says the hike coordinators made independent checks of the Biafran relief handling and finally decided to channel funds raised through the U.N. rather than a church agency to prevent possible criticism from religious factions whose agencies were not selected.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) will get the final third of the funds raised from the hike. The FAO has agreed to earmark the suburban youth money to an agricultural development project in operation in Ecuador with substantial funds from that country's government.

Wurm says the Ecuadorian project is based on this principle: "If you give a man a fish, he eats for a day. If you teach a man to fish, he eats for life. In the case of Ecuador," Wurm adds, "what is being taught is better farming."

WURM IS NOT optimistic about reaching the Hike for the Hungry's original fund goal of $120,000. He says it will be Saturday, the day after the hike, before he has "even an estimate" of how much has been raised.

"But I think we've already achieved one goal — that of getting more people personally involved," Wurm said.

"We may have as many as 2,000 people making a personal sacrifice by marching. Another 8,000 to 10,000 are their sponsors."

"This means we have 12,000 people investing something of themselves, small or great, in the cause for hunger," he declared.

Woods Renews College Plea

by MARY SCHLOTT

Arlington Heights Village Pres John G. Woods will renew his plea for early development of a Northwest suburban state college during today's Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) meeting in Chicago.

Woods says he has already discussed the area's need with the new "super board" president, George Clements, whom he knows through business contacts, and "thinks highly of."

He told the Herald he hopes to make the same points with the full IBHE complement that he has already made with Clements — that the Northwest suburban area is the fastest growing area in the state, that an extremely high percentage of its students are college material and that early action on development of a state "commuter college" here to insure land will be available.

Appearing with Woods will be High School Dist. 214 administrator Jack Martin. The two will represent a Northwest suburban citizens committee that lost out to Park Forest in a similar bid two years ago.

WOODS SAYS HE understands that the IBHE staff plans to recommend that the "super board" limit 1969 action to charging a study committee with looking over such things as population growth data and making new recommendations on what areas should get the priority when more senior college site money is available.

Woods says the staff apparently thinks the IBHE should put its major emphasis this General Assembly session on insuring that the legislature provide funds for construction of the two already-approved new colleges at Park Forest and Springfield.

"I think a new priority study is very much in order," Woods declared, adding that he is confident the Northwest suburbs would end up in first place on that list.

He warned, however, that it is essential that the study be "expedited" so purchase of land for a new Northwest suburban college can be made "before the cost becomes exorbitant or the land is just not available."

"That's a very real possibility," he declared.

THE IBHE ADDED THE new senior college matter to its agenda after State Reps., Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, and E. K. Giorgi, D-Rockford, introduced a bill calling for location of two new senior colleges in Rockford and the suburban Northwest.

Woods says he supports the Rockford location, too, although he thinks their need is not as great as the local need.

"I'm in favor of Rockford, too. After all it's the second largest city in the state. It is not too far behind our community in terms of need and the ability of students to use the facilities."

Martin says the committee will be taking much the same approach as it did two years ago in its unsuccessful bid to get a senior college here.

"We feel this is a new board," Martin pointed out. "We won't feel bashful about saying what we did before — that the need is greatest here and that land is getting scarcer all the time."

The Northwest Municipal Conference, which draws its membership from Des Plaines to Barrington, has given strong backings to the citizens committee efforts.

Mrs. Margery Whitcomb of the Palatine Township Mental Health Advisory Committee has urged that a "township mental health committee under the provisions of the Mental Health Facilities Act" be formed to replace the present committee.

The act, passed in 1965 by the Illinois Legislature allows a municipality to create a mental health fund.

The proposed mental health board would be empowered to review and evaluate community mental health services and facilities, to submit a program of community mental health services and facilities, to employ personnel needed to carry out this program, and to enter into contracts for the rendition or operation of services and facilities on a per capita basis.

The new committee would serve as a constant adviser to the township supervisor and the board of auditors during the year, and would make recommendations concerning expenditures of excess funds.

Because "they would be more than an advisory committee," the new board would be able to take more positive action than in the past.

Mrs. Whitcomb said Wheeling Township has this type of board.

THE PRESENT Palatine Mental Health Advisory Committee has also recommended the establishment of a family counseling service, "when the township is not in such a critical financial situation."

The advisory committee expressed "disappointment" at their share of this year's surplus township budget, which allocated $28,000 for mental health.

Mrs. Whitcomb said that if townships could get together and cooperate with one another, there could be "more efficient planning and expenditure" of existing funds. She suggested that Palatine and Wheeling townships could join with Elk Grove and Schaumburg in combining their services.

Discussing the proposed new committee, Mrs. Whitcomb, a professional social worker, said that "wonderful people have seen the need" for this type of committee. "It would be a step in the right direction to acquire the services needed by the Northwest suburbs in the field of mental health."

With more people coming into the area, "there is greater need" for mental health services, she said.

Mrs. Whitcomb said, "If Palatine Township is sincere in wanting to provide good mental health facilities and services to its residents, this is one possible step that could be taken by the governmental unit. There may be other or better things we could do."

Herald Writer Resigns

The resignation of Mrs. Hester Kline, a 21-year veteran of Paddock Publications' news department, was announced today by Charles E. Hayes, editor-in-chief.

Mrs. Kline's resignation as Herald staff writer was for personal reasons.

She joined Paddock Publications in 1948 as news editor of the Mount Prospect Herald and had been associated with the Rolling Meadows Herald since August, 1959, a period when the city nearly doubled in population and the Herald expanded from weekly to tri-weekly and, most recently, daily frequency.

Expressing regret at Mrs. Kline's departure, Hayes paid tribute to her community achievements and professional contributions.

"A LOYAL and valued employee, she is a sincere booster of Rolling Meadows and has provided civic spirit and leadership abilities which helped to create the kind of community in which all of us can take pride," said Hayes. "She has been closely identified with growth and development of both the city and the Herald. Her energy, enthusiasm, and dedication will serve as an example for others."

Burn's Campaigning Hit By Committeeman

Palatine Township Republican Committeeman Walter A. Schaw Monday praised the conduct of this year's township election campaign "with one exception."

Schaw criticized John J. Burns, Democratic candidate for township collector, for failing to list his party affiliation on campaign material and for "spreading campaign material that has no bearing on the elections."

Some of Burns' material calls for an end to power failures, overcrowded schools and flooding.

When my long sought ship comes in Grant that its cargo be not of mere
wealth,
Not of jewels, but measured in health.
Pray that its treasure chest always will
be
Brimfull of tolerance and humility.
May its goodwill bring and forever will
ban
Misunderstanding of my fellow man.
mend
When my ship's journey comes to an end.

Writing poetry is enjoyment and satisfaction for Philip Erck of Mount Prospect. It's his hobby. It's expressing 70 years of a man's life in a simple sentence tempered with the wisdom of experience.

"I have never had any formal training in poetry. When I was in school, we didn't study poetry like the children do today," explained Erck. "Writing just comes naturally for me, and I find satisfaction in expressing my thoughts on paper."

Erck, a retired dental laboratory technician, writes in his spare time, especially during the winter months when "time hangs heavy on my hands." His poetry is light, simple, and refreshing. Many of his poems are humorous, while some are sprinkled with a twinge of sadness for the days gone by.

The day I do regret was when
I thought it would be fine
To hold a rare reunion with
That old gang of mine.
I found the fellows changed it seems
Unlike the friends I knew
No doubt, they felt the same of me
And disappointed, too.
So always leave your memories
Way back there in the past
Don't try to bring them up to date
For then they'll never last.

"My poems are light in content and simple, because I don't enjoy 'heavy' poems — poems that are geared strictly for the intellectual, the student of serious poetry," he said.

"I write for the common people who still enjoy the simple things in life. I try to capture the same simplicity in my poems that Edward Guest did in his works."

ERCK WRITES ON A variety of subjects, but his favorite theme is nature and its beauty. "People just don't seem to appreciate the simple things in life, like a beautiful sunset or the coming of spring,

which we can always have and enjoy at no expense."

The protesting thunders echo
On far-flung mountains of stone
Her penmanship of lightning
These precious things I own.
Each unfinished rainbow's hallow
Or the dew on the rose-covered vine,
And the perfume of fleeting showers,
These priceless things are mine.

"I wish that I hadn't been forced to retire because of illness," he noted with a touch of sadness, "but I am getting old, and what more can I expect at this age? I have too much free time on my hands — free time is no longer a luxury but a routine."

"Each day is the same, and I live my life now for my grandchildren. At my age, I guess there's not much time left anyway."

As the sands of time drift slowly
Through the hour-glass of life,
I pause and reflect on its meaning
With its pleasures and its strife.
Have I stretched the bounds of honesty,
To achieve material gain,
Only to win false happiness,
Its reward, a tarnished stain.

Do I sit in unfair judgment?
Without due authority,
Or listen to idle gossip
And that no one's important but me?
I need not question these charges,
As I fear they all could be true,
Now probe your soul for an answer
Can they also be said of you?

Man Dies in Freak Accident

A Chicago man was killed Friday night in a freak accident in front of the Holiday Inn Motel, 3405 Algonquin Road, Rolling Meadows.

Army Sgt. George W. Bostic, 22, 842 W. Ainslie, who was stationed at the Nike Base in Arlington Heights, died after being struck by two autos moments apart.

A coroner's inquest into the death was postponed yesterday when the driver of one of the cars, Mrs. Anna L. McGoldrick, 41, 4732 Arbor Drive, Rolling Meadows, said she was unable to contact a lawyer. The hearing was continued until April 21.

Rolling Meadows police gave this account of the accident:

Bostic was driving west on Algonquin Road as he approached Tollview Drive. At the same time, a vehicle made a left turn onto Algonquin Road directly in front of the victim's car. Bostic applied the brakes and came to a complete stop, but his car stalled. He then got out of the car to push it to the shoulder of the road, while the passenger in his car, Spec. 4 Lawrence Hill of Chicago, steered.

WHILE HE pushed the car in the darkness, the vehicle driven by Mrs. McGoldrick hit Bostic and sent him sprawling into the road. Mrs. McGoldrick stopped her car and, along with Hill, went to aid Bostic. But another car, driven by Donald H. Cavi, 38, 4238 Wilson Ave., Rolling Meadows, struck the downed man after avoiding a collision with Mrs. McGoldrick's stopped car.

The accident occurred between 10:30 and 10:50 p.m., according to Officer Charles Smith. Bostic's car lights would not function because his battery failed, Smith said.

Mrs. McGoldrick was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision and Cavi was charged with colliding with a pedestrian on a roadway.

War Memorial To Be Topic

Palatine organizations have been invited to a special meeting of the Palatine Community Council Wednesday night to consider possible support of a memorial to local servicemen who have died in Vietnam.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brookway.

According to Mrs. Arlene Kallinger, corresponding secretary of the community council, all organizations and churches in Palatine have been invited.

Establishment of a Vietnam memorial was suggested by Herald City Editor Ed Murnane after Pfc. David B. Arnold, a Palatine youth who graduated from Fremd High School, was killed in the war.

SEVERAL POSSIBLE memorials have been suggested, including dedication of a room in Palatine's proposed new library and dedication of a portable band shelter which would be used by the Palatine Village Band.

"The memorial deemed most suitable will be more meaningful to the families of these men if the entire community participates in this project," Mrs. Kallinger said.

Set May 7 Park Hearing

Circuit Court Judge Harry Comerford has set May 7 for the hearing on a petition filed to dissolve the Palatine Rural Park District.

The petition which was circulated by a group of homeowners in Palatine and Rolling Meadows was accepted by the judge Monday morning.

More than 100 signatures from people living in Banbury Lane and Pebble Creek of Palatine, and Creekside and Forest Estates of Rolling Meadows are attached to the petition, according to Roger Bjorvik, local attorney hired to represent the homeowners.

Bjorvik said he's now contacting representatives from several groups to testify at the hearing. A 20-day notice of the public hearing is required.

The group is charging the Palatine Rural Park District board of commissioners with several violations of Illinois statute which are given as just cause for dissolution in the code.

BUT FRANCIS KELLY, attorney for the rural park district said the statute does not apply to his district.

The district could be dissolved without calling for a general election after the public hearing, according to statute.

"If the allegations are found to be true by the judge, he can declare the district dissolved," the statute states.

Most of the areas involved in the petition represent subdivisions interested in annexing from the rural district so annexation to the Palatine and Rolling Meadows Park Districts would be possible.

The hearing is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on May 7 in Room 1703 of the Civic Center in Chicago.

Fund Approval Set

Allocation of surplus funds in the town budget, will highlight the Palatine Town meeting tonight at 8, in Kimball Hill School, Rolling Meadows.

Electeds will be asked to approve transfer of $28,000 for mental health, $14,000 for School Dist. 15, and $950 for the leisure club for senior citizens. The surplus amounted to $43,950.84. At the last township board meeting, it was pointed out that the extra 84 cents, "could be used for stamps to mail checks out."

After preliminaries, an introduction of officers will be held, and Margaret Chapman, town clerk, will give instructions for the meeting.

A moderator will be elected and sworn in, followed by a reading of reports of the town fund, general assistance, collector's and assessor's. Voters will be asked to give their approval of the reports.

THE TOWN BUDGET will then be adopted, pending voter approval.

Following the budget will be a consideration of the resale of real estate and the transaction of surplus funds to the three groups asking for funds.

After an adoption of the budget and highway commissioner's budget, an open forum will be held. Plans will then be formulated for the next town meeting.

Collect $4,060 For UCP Fund

Nearly 900 Palatine, Inverness and Rolling Meadows men and women have volunteered their time since Jan. 12 to collect $4,060.61 in United Cerebral Palsy's annual fund-raising appeal.

With the campaign nearing completion, UCP chairmen report the appeal has been very successful.

The annual appeal began on Jan. 12 with a "53-Minute March."

The money donated will be used to continue and strengthen UCP's program of direct services (such as the Child Developmental Center, family counseling, day camps and adult programs) research and education.

Ogilvie Woos New Tax

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is expected to ask for a state income tax, a temporary one-cent increase in the state sales tax, and hikes in two or more other existing taxes in his budget message today.

Ogilvie's budget message will be presented setting in that he will be the first governor in state history to submit a one-year, rather than a two-year budget.

Ike on Last Journey

WASHINGTON — A 21-gun salute sounded through the cavernous Union Station on Monday as the 10-car funeral train for Dwight David Eisenhower, general of the army and 34th President of the United States, began the long journey to the plains of Kansas.

The train will arrive at midnight today in Abilene. The former president will be buried in the tiny all-faith chapel named Place of Meditation, next to his son, Dwight Doud Eisenhower, who died at the age of 3.

Milton in Hospital

WASHINGTON — Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late President, was admitted to Walter Reed Army Medical Center Monday "for observation."

The manager's office at the Washington Hilton Hotel said the 66-year-old president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University complained of not feeling well and asked to be hospitalized for a checkup. In Baltimore, George S. Wills, information director of Johns Hopkins, stressed the hospitalization is purely precautionary.

Obtain A-Plant Land

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie has announced the state has completed acquisition of 6,800 acres at $25.5 million for the atomic accelerator in the Weston area.

Ray Dickerson, director of the Department of Business and Economic Development, said title to the land will be conveyed to the Atomic Energy Commission in the "very near future."

Firms Late Tax Hit

SPRINGFIELD — A crackdown on business firms delinquent in filing returns for use, retailers' and service occupation taxes has been announced by State Revenue Director George Mahin. He sent letters to all retailers pointing out tax returns are due by the last day of each month following the month for which the tax liability is incurred.

Mahin said a rigid enforcement program against taxpayers who are two months delinquent will begin today.

Sirhan Trial Resumes

LOS ANGELES — The trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan for the murder of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy resumes today with a prosecution psychiatrist, Dr. Seymour Pollack, on the witness stand. The case will probably go to the jury of seven men and five women next week.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the cost to the county to date to insure a fair trial for the 25-year-old defendant was $658,595. It is estimated the total cost will run to $1 million.

North Viets Rebuild

SAIGON — U.S. sources with access to intelligence reports and aerial photos said North Vietnam has completely repaired the damage inflicted by American bombers in the air war that former President Lyndon B. Johnson began scaling down exactly one year ago.

Other reports from North Vietnam said the country is suffering from food deficiencies and that a general manpower shortage is contributing to industrial shortcomings.

"If you would revise your terms I feel sure you can sell this property, and if you would cut the price in half you can sell it tomorrow," J. C. Busenhart told the board of Dist. 57 in his report on the Central School sale.

In the last two weeks Busenhart has consulted more than 20 of the organizations that had requested bidding information but had not submitted bids.

Busenhart reported objections to the price of $4.10 per square foot. Prospective bidders complained that this is top price, not a base price for the area. The property is 114,000 square feet.

Other factors in the terms and conditions questioned by firms were the 18-month delay in the release of title, the 5 per cent interest to be paid by the district on deposited funds and the need for new zoning.

The property is partially zoned B-3. The portion of the site that is vacant is not zoned. Busenhart said any owner, including the district, can seek a new zoning from the village.

Prospective buyers have suggested plans that include luxury apartments, an office building or a large shopping complex.

Price suggestions ranged from $3.75 to $4 per square foot. Busenhart recommended $3.90, the base price, and said perhaps title could be released immediately under certain conditions. He also recommended that the board get a B-3 zoning on the entire site.

The board considered giving immediate possession to the buyer, allowing the new owner to use the balance of the site to begin construction immediately while leasing the present building back to the school. This would require special approval of the village which has an ordinance against two buildings on one site. Safety conditions would also have to be met, board members said.

Busenhart said at least one buyer would like to tear down most of the present buildings using only the last addition.

The possible changes in price, possession and zoning will be carried back to firms Busenhart consulted to learn their reaction.

Woods Renews College Plea

by MARY SCHLOTT

Arlington Heights Village Pres. John G. Woods will renew his plea for early development of a Northwest suburban state college during today's Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) meeting in Chicago.

Woods says he has already discussed the area's need with the new "super board" president, George Clements, whom he knows through business contacts, and "thinks highly of."

He told the Herald he hopes to make the same points with the full IBHE complement that he has already made with Clements — that the Northwest suburban area is the fastest growing area in the state, that an extremely high percentage of its students are college material and that early action on development of a state "commuter college" here to insure land will be available.

Appearing with Woods will be High School Dist. 214 administrator Jack Martin. The two will represent a Northwest suburban citizens committee that lost out to Park Forest in a similar bid two years ago.

WOODS SAYS HE understands that the IBHE staff plans to recommend that the "super board" limit 1969 action to charging a study committee with looking over such things as population growth data and making new recommendations on what areas should get the priority when more senior college site money is available.

Woods says the staff apparently thinks the IBHE should put its major emphasis this General Assembly session on insuring that the legislature provide funds for construction of the two already-approved new colleges at Park Forest and Springfield.

"I think a new priority study is very much in order," Woods declared, adding that he is confident the Northwest suburbs would end up in first place on that list.

He warned, however, that it is essential that the study be "expedited" so purchase of land for a new Northwest suburban college can be made "before the cost becomes exorbitant or the land is just not available."

"That's a very real possibility," he declared.

THE IBHE ADDED THE new senior college matter to its agenda after State Reps., Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, and E. K. Giorgi, D-Rockford, introduced a bill calling for location of two new senior colleges in Rockford and the suburban Northwest.

Woods says he supports the Rockford location, too, although he thinks their need is not as great as the local need.

"I'm in favor of Rockford, too. After all it's the second largest city in the state. It is not too far behind our community in terms of need and the ability of students to use the facilities."

Martin says the committee will be taking much the same approach as it did two years ago in its unsuccessful bid to get a senior college here.

"We feel this is a new board," Martin pointed out. "We won't feel bashful about saying what we did before — that the need is greatest here and that land is getting scarcer all the time."

The Northwest Municipal Conference, which draws its membership from Des Plaines to Barrington, has given strong backings to the citizens committee efforts.

Expect Quiet Vote

It will be a quiet and uneventful evening in Wheeling Township tonight, as only one of the eight township posts this year will be contested.

Herman F. Koeneman of Arlington Heights is independently seeking the office of township assessor. He will be opposed by the Republican caucus' choice, Marshall Theroux of Arlington Heights, for the position.

The other seven candidates, all supported by the Republicans, should have a quiet victory evening, unless an unexpected write-in tide should develop.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus of Mount Prospect will become one of the few women in the county to hold the post of township assessor. She will take over the position held by Albert Peters, who is retiring this year.

She has served in the Chicago office of Sen. Charles Percy and as an officer of the American Cancer Society.

KOENEMAN, an occasional Democrat running this time without regular Democratic support, faces Theroux, a Republican who has been active in township political activities during the last few years.

The three candidates for the three positions on the township's board of auditors are Fred Reimann of Mount Prospect, Merle Willis of Wheeling, and Ronald Wittmayer of Arlington Heights.

Lawrence Carrozza, highway commissioner, and Marjorie Annen Carter, tax collector, are also seeking to retain their positions. They ran unopposed prior to the caucus, and, like six of the seven other candidates, should have a quiet evening tonight.

Five Seek Park Election

A total of five candidates will seek election to the Mount Prospect Park board today, in balloting which will place two of them on the board for six year terms.

Candidates for the park board are: Richard Tank, Mount Prospect, an incumbent member of the board; William Selep, Des Plaines; Richard R. Rebmam, Des Plaines; Norman Pick, Mount Prospect and Michael Buckley, Des Plaines.

Tank will be seeking reelection to his post on the board while all other candidates will be seeking their first terms as members of the park board.

Edward Boddy, incumbent member of the board and one of the founders of the Mount Prospect Park District is not seeking reelection at this time.

BODDY ORIGINALLY filed as a candidate but later withdrew. Balloting for the park seats will take place today from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. at six locations. Polls are: Kensington school, the Mount Prospect Village Hall, Mount Prospect Country Club park building, Highridge Knolls School, Devonshire School, and the Elk Grove motel, 2621 Higgins Road.

Hike for Hungry Numbers May Swell

More than 1,500 local young people have already signed up to trek from Park Ridge to Rolling Meadows in Friday's Hike for the Hungry benefit.

David Wurm, youth minister at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect and a march coordinator, estimates that as many as 8,000 to 10,000 sponsors may be backing the hike.

Wurm says the number may swell by tomorrow, the last day to register for the march.

Sponsors will be contributing anywhere from 5 cents to $10 a mile to the Hike for the Hungry's three benefit organizations — Biafran relief, an Ecuadorian farm project and the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

Mark Severs of Arlington Heights, publicity chairman for the youth-sponsored project, says Prospect High School so far holds the registration record — 180 students. At Conant High School in Hoffman Estates, well off the march route, more than 100 students have been recruited by Charrie Kamin.

LAST NIGHT, student volunteers converged on Trinity Lutheran Church, Des Plaines, to paint signs that some of the marchers will carry. Another group gathered at St. Paul's Church in Mount Prospect to make armbands that will serve as the hikers' identification.

"Down with Hunger" and "Soul Power" will be typical of signs the marchers will carry, Severs says.

Adult volunteers who will help with the march will be briefed tonight at 8 at St. Paul's.

Hike coordinators estimate that 200 adults will be needed to assist along the march route. The adults will be serving as parade marshals, as crossing guards, or manning checkpoints where students can have their progress recorded — or let their parents know they're giving up.

The 18-mile parade route will follow few major streets.

THE FUNDS DONATED by sponsors will be split three ways. A third will go to the Northwest Opportunity Center, a self-help agency working with Northwest suburban low income families — many of them Spanish-speaking migrants or ex-migrants.

Another third will be channeled through the United Nations to the International Red Cross, transporting agency for all food and medical relief sent to starving and ill residents of warring Biafra and Nigeria.

Wurm says the hike coordinators made independent checks of the Biafran relief handling and finally decided to channel funds raised through the U.N. rather than a church agency to prevent possible criticism from religious factions whose agencies were not selected.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) will get the final third of the funds raised from the hike. The FAO has agreed to earmark the sub-

Writes Light Verse

by GERRY DEZONNA

When my long sought ship comes in Grant that its cargo be not of mere wealth,

Not of jewels, but measured in health.

Pray that its treasure chest always will be

Brimfull of tolerance and humility.

May its goodwill bring and forever will ban

Misunderstanding of my fellow man.

And all broken promises, it then will mend

When my ship's journey comes to an end.

Writing poetry is enjoyment and satisfaction for Philip Erck of Mount Prospect. It's his hobby. It's expressing 70 years of a man's life in a simple sentence tempered with the wisdom of experience.

"I have never had any formal training in poetry. When I was in school, we didn't study poetry like the children do today," explained Erck. "Writing just comes naturally for me, and I find satisfaction in expressing my thoughts on paper."

Erck, a retired dental laboratory technician, writes in his spare time, especially during the winter months when "time hangs heavy on my hands." His poetry is light, simple, and refreshing. Many of his poems are humorous, while some are sprinkled with a twinge of sadness for the days gone by.

The day I do regret was when I thought it would be fine To hold a rare reunion with That old gang of mine. I found the fellows changed it seems Unlike the friends I knew No doubt, they felt the same of me And disappointed, too.

So always leave your memories Way back there in the past Don't try to bring them up to date For then they'll never last.

"My poems are light in content and simple, because I don't enjoy 'heavy' poems — poems that are geared strictly for the intellectual, the student of serious poetry," he said.

"I write for the common people who still enjoy the simple things in life. I try to capture the same simplicity in my poems that Edward Guest did in his works."

ERCK WRITES ON A variety of subjects, but his favorite theme is nature and its beauty. "People just don't seem to appreciate the simple things in life, like a beautiful sunset or the coming of spring, which we can always have and enjoy at no expense."

Vote On Surplus Funds Distribution Tonight

THE DANGERS OF tornadoes and other catastrophes were explained by members of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit over the weekend for visitors to Randhurst. Mount Prospect Fireman Ken Koeppen, above, offered material on tornadoes as part of the display.

Wheeling Township electors will gather at Miner Junior High School tonight to approve annual budgets and vote on the distribution of surplus funds.

Township activities are supported by a 2 per cent commission paid the township collector on personal and real estate taxes paid through her office. After officials estimate expenses in all categories for the coming year, the "surplus" is allocated to schools, mental health agencies and other eligible groups.

This year's excess funds, after making allowance for transfers to the general assistance and cemetery funds, will amount to some $251,000.

THE BOARD of auditors approved the suggestion of the township mental health board that $83,760 be slated to area agencies. Township officials will recommend that residents grant $40,000 to the Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, $24,400 to Northwest Mental Health Clinic, $10,360 to Countryside Center for the Retarded and $7,000 to Community Social Services of Wheeling.

A fifth grant of $2,000 is suggested for the Salvation Army's family services agency in Des Plaines.

Over 50 clubs for senior citizens in three areas submitted proposed budgets for their work and the auditors' recommendation will be $3,100 for Buffalo Grove, $2,200 for Arlington Heights and $2400 for Wheeling.

Suggested funds for historical societies in Arlington Heights and Wheeling are $4500 for each club.

BULK OF THE FUNDS traditionally goes to township elementary schools and this year's recommendation will be for not less than $150,000.

Transfer of the funds can come only after electors at the meeting approve a town budget of $151,350, a general assistance budget of $27,800 and a cemetery budget of $9,175.

A fourth budget for the township road and bridge fund of $344,900 will be approved by the auditors. Of this amount, $120,000 must go to municipalities.

The road and bridge fund is supported by a separate tax which the township must levy to qualify for motor fuel tax funds.

Rev. Golisch Receives Degree

The Rev. Dr. John Golisch of Mount Prospect received his doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Minnesota in March.

Dr. Golisch is a part-time associate pastor at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect. He is also an assistant coordinator for mental health services at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge.

"Dr. and Mrs. Golisch live at 217 S. School St. with their four children.

Easter Week Services Set

The Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect will begin Easter Sunday worship services at 6:45 a.m. with a sunrise breakfast sponsored by the congregation's youth.

Pastor Bowen will speak on "Deciding for Life" at the 8, 9:15, and 11:15 a.m. services. The combined chancel choirs will present instrumental and vocal music arrangements of "Alleluia, Christ is Risen" by Young and "Alleluia" by Randall Thompson.

Initiate Miss Farkas

Linda Farkas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Farkas of 1226 N. Wheeling Road, Mount Prospect, has been initiated by Alpha Phi sorority at Northern Illinois University.

Miss Farkas, a sophomore, is active in the mixed chorus and is junior panhellenic representative for Alpha Phi. She was a candidate for Christmas snowball queen.

Holy Communion will be offered at a candlelight service on April 3, Maundy Thursday, at 8 p.m. The combined chancel choirs will present the Good Friday worship service with an arrangement of the Bach cantata, "God's Time is the Best," at 8 p.m. on April 4. The traditional Good Friday scriptures will also be read as part of the service.

Butler Dean's List

Three local students have been named to the dean's list at Butler University, Indianapolis, Ind.

They are Karen L. Chodora of 290 N. Westgate Road, Carole J. Dormal of 217 N. Owen and Maryann Keeney of 1001 Ironwood Drive.

Matthews Initiated

Roger B. Matthews, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Matthews of 223 N. Emerson, Mount Prospect, has been initiated into Alpha Upsilon chapter of Alpha Kappa Lambda at Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln. He is a freshman.

Get Absentee Ballots

Absentee ballots for the April 12 election in Dist. 57 are available now at the administration office, 701 West Gregory, Mount Prospect.

They may be obtained by mail or by calling CL 9-1200 through Monday. The office will be closed Friday and Saturday of this week.

April 8 and 9 absentee voters can come into the office and complete their voting.

Seek To Buy Films

Dist. 57 has submitted an application for the purchase of films and film strip under a Title 2 federal program.

The application seeks $3,588.90 plus $101.02 for processing. The district's application also includes purchases for St. Paul Lutheran School in the amount of $353.48 and St. Raymond's Catholic School for $975.90.

Poet Writes For Common Folk

For penmanship of lightning
These precious things I own
Each unfinished rainbow's hallow
Or the dew on the rose-covered vine,
And the perfume of fleeting showers,
These priceless things are mine

"I wish that I hadn't been forced to retire because of illness," he noted with a touch of sadness, "but I am getting old, and what more can I expect at this age? I have too much free time on my hands — free time is no longer a luxury but a routine.

"Each day is the same, and I live my life now for my grandchildren. At my age, I guess there's not much time left anyway."

As the sands of time drift slowly
Through the hour-glass of life,
I pause and reflect on its meaning
With its pleasures and its strife.
Have I stretched the bounds of honesty,
To achieve material gain,
Only to win false happiness,
Its reward, a tarnished stain.

Do I sit in unfair judgment?
Without due authority.
Or listen to idle gossip
And that no one's important but me?
I need not question these charges,
As I fear they all could be true.
Now probe your soul for an answer
Can they also be said of you?

Woods says he supports the Rockford location, too, although he thinks their need is not as great as the local need.

"I'm in favor of Rockford, too. After all it's the second largest city in the state. It is not too far behind our community in terms of need and the ability of students to use the facilities."

Martin says the committee will be taking much the same approach as it did two years ago in its unsuccessful bid to get a senior college here.

"We feel this is a new board," Martin pointed out. "We won't feel bashful about saying what we did before — that the need is greatest here and that land is getting scarcer all the time."

The Northwest Municipal Conference, which draws its membership from Des Plaines to Barrington, has given strong backings to the citizens committee efforts.

All See Victory

All the candidates in today's municipal elections are predicting victory with the Village Caucus Party and independents alike, certain that they will triumph.

The Caucus is trying to make doubly sure of their predictions with a last minute phone call campaign geared to reach some 3,000 voters.

In addition, the party will staff each polling place with poll watchers equipped with the names of each voter in the precinct. An attempt will be made about noon today to contact all the pro Caucus residents who have not yet voted, and get them to the polls.

"If it functions the way it's supposed to function," we will not be surprised if we win and win easily," said one Caucus official. "This is based on the manpower and the kind of work that we have put into this."

THE CAUCUS faces its principal opposition from Mrs. Jeanette Novotny, the incumbent village clerk who is running as an independent and from Mrs. Barbara Vidmar, an independent for trustee.

Both think they can win — Mrs. Novotny on the basis of established ties in the village established during her 13-year residency and four-year term as clerk, and Mrs. Vidmar from the votes of people who are generally discontent with the way the village has been run under Caucus-dominated boards.

The Caucus thinks its manpower and the magnitude of its campaign will allow its entire slate to sweep into office including Trustee John Walsh, candidate for village president, Mrs. Betty Revard, candidate for clerk, Frank Palmatier, William Griffin and Dwight Walston, candidates for trustee.

FOILED IN an attempt for last minute voter attention, made by Mrs. Jean Hanlon, independent candidate for trustee, was foiled by the death of a President.

Eisenhower's death closed the post offices yesterday, the same day Mrs. Hanlon had picked for a final mailing of literature. She is still optimistic about her chances, as is Charles Zeller, who is running, fitfully, for village president.

"I made one prediction," said Zeller Monday night. "I said that there would be a six to one majority for me in some areas of the village."

He said he based this in part on figures he heard reported by the Caucus in the 21st precinct on the near north side of the village.

Zeller entered the race saying he thought that the Caucus deserved opposition, but he never fully developed a platform.

HE PROBABLY has the slimmest chances of any candidate.

The Caucus, keeping its concern high until all votes are counted, will maintain a running tabulation at its headquarters in the Evergreen shopping center in downtown Arlington Heights.

Expect Quiet Vote

It will be a quiet and uneventful evening in Wheeling Township tonight, as only one of the eight township posts this year will be contested.

Herman F. Koenenman of Arlington Heights is independently seeking the office of township assessor. He will be opposed by the Republican caucus' choice, Marshall Theroux of Arlington Heights, for the position.

The other seven candidates, all supported by the Republicans, should have a quiet victory evening, unless an unexpected write-in tide should develop.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus of Mount Prospect will become one of the few women in the county to hold the post of township assessor. She will take over the position held by Albert Peters, who is retiring this year.

She has served in the Chicago office of Sen. Charles Percy and as an officer of the American Cancer Society.

KOENEMAN, an occasional Democrat running this time without regular Democratic support, faces Theroux, a Republican who has been active in township political activities during the last few years.

The three candidates for the three positions on the township's board of auditors are Fred Reumann of Mount Prospect, Merle Willis of Wheeling, and Ronald Wittmayer of Arlington Heights.

Dorothy Hauff, another Republican, is seeking to retain her seat as township clerk. She was opposed prior to Feb. 4, but now lacks opposition.

Lawrence Carrozza, highway commissioner, and Marjorie Annen Carter, tax collector, are also seeking to retain their positions. They ran unopposed prior to the caucus, and, like six of the seven other candidates, should have a quiet evening tonight.

Futurities

Polls open today for village, park, library and township elections from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Annual town meeting for Wheeling Township will take place at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights at 8 tonight.

Hike for Hungry Numbers May Swell

More than 1,500 local young people have already signed up to trek from Park Ridge to Rolling Meadows in Friday's Hike for the Hungry benefit.

David Wurm, youth minister at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect and a march coordinator, estimates that as many as 8,000 to 10,000 sponsors may be backing the hike.

Wurm says the number may swell by tomorrow, the last day to register for the march.

Sponsors will be contributing anywhere from 5 cents to $10 a mile to the Hike for the Hungry's three benefit organizations — Biafran relief, an Ecuadorian farm project and the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

Mark Severs of Arlington Heights, publicity chairman for the youth-sponsored project, says Prospect High School so far holds the registration record — 180 students. At Conant High School in Hoffman Estates, well off the march route, more than 100 students have been recruited by Charrie Kamin.

LAST NIGHT, student volunteers converged on Trinity Lutheran Church, Des Plaines, to paint signs that some of the marchers will carry. Another group gathered at St. Paul's Church in Mount Prospect to make armbands that will serve as the hikers' identification.

"Down with Hunger" and "Soul Power" will be typical of signs the marchers will carry, Severs says.

Adult volunteers who will help with the march will be briefed tonight at 8 at St. Paul's.

Hike coordinators estimate that 200 adults will be needed to assist along the march route. The adults will be serving as parade marshals, as crossing guards, or manning checkpoints where students can have their progress recorded — or let their parents know they're giving up.

The 18-mile parade route will follow few major streets. Police in the six towns and cities along the route — Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows — helped hike coordinators pick a route that would tie up auto traffic as little as possible.

THE FUNDS DONATED by sponsors will be split three ways. A third will go to the Northwest Opportunity Center, a self-help agency working with Northwest suburban low income families — many of them Spanish-speaking migrants or ex-migrants.

Another third will be channeled through the United Nations to the International Red Cross, transporting agency for all food and medical relief sent to starving and ill residents of warring Biafra and Nigeria.

Wurm says the hike coordinators made independent checks of the Biafran relief handling and finally decided to channel funds raised through the U.N. rather than a church agency to prevent possible criticism from religious factions whose agencies were not selected.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) will get the final third of the funds raised from the hike. The FAO has agreed to earmark the sub-

THE FACE OF A POET is the face of somebody looking for insights into the days and memories of a lifetime. Philip Erck of Mount Prospect likes to be called the poet with the common touch.

Writes Light Verse

by GERRY DeZONNA

When my long sought ship comes in Grant that its cargo be not of mere
wealth,
Not of jewels, but measured in health.
be
Brimfull of tolerance and humility.
May its goodwill bring and forever will
ban
Misunderstanding of my fellow man.
mend

When my ship's journey comes to an end,
Writing poetry is enjoyment and satisfaction for Philip Erck of Mount Prospect. It's his hobby. It's expressing 70 years of a man's life in a simple sentence tempered with the wisdom of experience.

"I have never had any formal training in poetry. When I was in school, we didn't study poetry like the children do today," explained Erck. "Writing just comes naturally for me, and I find satisfaction in expressing my thoughts on paper."

Erck, a retired dental laboratory technician, writes in his spare time, especially during the winter months when "time hangs heavy on my hands." His poetry is light, simple, and refreshing. Many of his poems are humorous, while some are sprinkled with a twinge of sadness for the days gone by.

The day I do regret was when
I thought it would be fine
To hold a rare reunion with
That old gang of mine.
I found the fellows changed it seems
Unlike the friends I knew
No doubt, they felt the same of me
And disappointed, too.
So always leave your memories
Way back there in the past
Don't try to bring them up to date
For then they'll never last.

"My poems are light in content and simple, because I don't enjoy 'heavy' poems — poems that are geared strictly for the intellectual, the student of serious poetry," he said.

"I write for the common people who still enjoy the simple things in life. I try to capture the same simplicity in my poems that Edward Guest did in his works."

ERCK WRITES ON A variety of subjects, but his favorite theme is nature and its beauty. "People just don't seem to appreciate the simple things in life, like a beautiful sunset or the coming of spring, which we can always have and enjoy at no expense."

Vote On Surplus Funds Distribution Tonight

THE DANGERS OF tornadoes and other catastrophes were explained by members of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit over the weekend for visitors to Randhurst.

On far-flung mountains of stone
Her penmanship of lightning
These precious things I own
Each unfinished rainbow's hallow
Or the dew on the rose-covered vine,
And the perfume of fleeting showers,
These priceless things are mine.

"I wish that I hadn't been forced to retire because of illness," he noted with a touch of sadness, "but I am getting old, and what more can I expect at this age? I have too much free time on my hands — free time is no longer a luxury but a routine.

"Each day is the same, and I live my life now for my grandchildren. At my age, I guess there's not much time left anyway."

As the sands of time drift slowly
Through the hour-glass of life,
I pause and reflect on its meaning
With its pleasures and its strife.
Have I stretched the bounds of honesty,
To achieve material gain,
Only to win false happiness,
Its reward, a tarnished stain.

Do I sit in unfair judgment?
Without due authority,
Or listen to idle gossip
And that no one's important but me?
I need not question these charges,
As I fear they all could be true,
Now probe your soul for an answer
Can they also be said of you?

Schedule Summer Classes

Subjects, dates and fees for Dist. 25's summer school session were set by board members last week.

Remedial programs in reading and mathematics are scheduled for one-hour daily sessions for students in grades one through eight. An hour class in language skills for grades five through eight and a half-hour session in speech for grades one through eight also are planned. Tuition for the four-week programs is $32.50, and class size is limited to five children.

Enrichment programs for grades three through eight will be offered in art, creative dramatics, developmental math-science lab, humanities and instrumental music. Classes will last 1½ hours for 12 to 25 pupils. Fee for instrumental music is $15 and for the other subjects, $20.

IN THE SPECIAL education area, hour-long classes are planned for students with learning disabilities and those who are deaf or hard of hearing. Class size max-

Wheeling Township electors will gather at Miner Junior High School tonight to approve annual budgets and vote on the distribution of surplus funds.

Transfer of the funds usually prompts hundreds of residents to turn out for the 8 p.m. town hall meeting.

Township activities are supported by a 2 per cent commission paid the township collector on personal and real estate taxes paid through her office. After officials estimate expenses in all categories for the coming year, the "surplus" is allocated to schools, mental health agencies and other eligible groups.

This year's excess funds, after making allowance for transfers to the general assistance and cemetery funds, will amount to some $251,000.

THE BOARD of auditors approved the suggestion of the township mental health board that $83,750 be slated to area agencies. Township officials will recommend that residents grant $40,000 to the Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, $34,400 to Northwest Mental Health Clinic, $10,360 to Countryside Center for the Retarded and $7,000 to Community Social Services of Wheeling.

A fifth grant of $2,000 is suggested for the Salvation Army's family services agency in Des Plaines.

Over 50 clubs for senior citizens in three areas submitted proposed budgets for their work and the auditors' recommendation will be $3,100 for Buffalo Grove, $2,200 for Arlington Heights and $2400 for Wheeling.

Suggested funds for historical societies in Arlington Heights and Wheeling are $4500 for each club.

BULK OF THE FUNDS traditionally goes to township elementary schools and this year's recommendation will be for not less than $150,000.

Transfer of the funds can come only after electors at the meeting approve a town budget of $151,350, a general assistance budget of $27,800 and a cemetery budget of $9,175.

A fourth budget for the township road and bridge fund of $344,900 will be approved by the auditors. Of this amount, $120,000 must go to municipalities.

The road and bridge fund is supported by a separate tax which the township must levy to qualify for motor fuel tax funds.

Rob Park District

Arlington Heights Park District employees had some trouble trying to get their work done yesterday.

Sometime over the weekend, a thief or thieves broke into the park district's office at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez, and took some office equipment.

Listed as missing were two typewriters, an adding machine, a calculator, the automatic answering device for the telephone, a postage meter, a camera and a tape recorder.

"They took almost everything electrical except the coffee pot," said Mrs. James Carns, superintendent of recreation. She said no cash was taken.

THE BURGLAR or burglars apparently gained access to the office through a window which contained an air conditioner. The time of the theft could not be pinpointed, but was thought to have been either Saturday night, Sunday or early Monday morning.

Mrs. Carns stated one of the drawers of one secretary's desk had been ransacked.

Temporary replacements for some of the equipment were found so that employees could work — they had to send out about 20 letters and type up the park district's budget.

Easter Egg Hunt Set for Tomorrow

Arlington Heights' Easter Egg advocates will have a chance to search for and seize eggs during the park district's annual Easter Egg Hunt tomorrow at 4 p.m.

Hunts will be held at Pioneer, Recreation and Hasbrook parks. There will be colored eggs and candy eggs hidden for children 8-years-old and younger.

BLUEBIRDS WILL be dyeing and wrapping the eggs and then Campfire Girls will be hiding the eggs at the three parks.

$900 in Tools Stolen From Morton Pontiac

Tools valued at more than $900 were stolen this weekend from Morton Pontiac, 1 S. Hickory, Arlington Heights.

The missing items were discovered Monday and reported to police. An investigation showed that apparently two men broke into the body shop through a rear window and then opened the back door.

Among the stolen items, which were in open cabinets, were two buffers, two spray guns, two impact drills, one air drill and one panel cutter.

Mrs. Peters Doesn't Back Caucus Slate

Mrs. A. C. Peters, wife of Wheeling Township Supervisor Albert Peters, wishes to correct the impression that she supports the Village Caucus slate in today's elections. An advertisement for the Caucus appearing in a recent edition of the Herald listed her as a Caucus supporter. "While I do endorse the Principles of the Caucus, I am for Mrs. Barbara Vidmar," Mrs. Peters said yesterday.
